SINCE the last edition of this Guide was published, in 1895, besides minor changes, the Exhibition of Manuscripts has been augmented by a special show-case for Greek Papyri and by the extension of the cases containing Charters.

The present edition also differs from those that have preceded it by including twenty plates of facsimiles. This new feature necessitates an increase in the price, which, it is hoped, will be justified by the additional interest thus given to the text of the descriptions.

DEPARTMENT OF MANUSCRIPTS.

THE collections of this Department have been formed partly by the acquisition of private libraries and partly by purchases and donations from year to year. The Manuscripts of Sir Robert Cotton, of Edward Harley, Earl of Oxford, and of Sir Hans Sloane, were among the first collections brought together by the Act of Parliament of 1753, to which the British Museum owes its origin. The Cotton MSS. had been presented to the nation by Sir John Cotton, grandson of Sir Robert, as early as 1700, and the sums paid for the Harley and Sloane MSS. were acknowledged to be much below their real value. The other collections are: The Royal MSS., presented by George II. in 1757; the King's MSS., collected by George III.; the Birch MSS., bequeathed by the Rev. Thomas Birch, D.D., in 1765; the Lansdowne MSS., of William Petty, Marquess of Lansdowne; the Arundel MSS., of Thomas Howard, 14th Earl of Arundel; the Burney MSS., of the Rev. Charles Burney, D.D.; the Hargrave MSS., of Francis Hargrave, K.C.; the Egerton MSS., bequeathed by Francis Egerton, Earl of Bridgewater, in 1829, and since augmented by purchases made from funds provided by him and by Charles Long, Lord Farnborough (1838); the Stowe MSS., collected by George Temple-Nugent-Grenville, Marquess of Buckingham; and the Additional MSS., the largest of all the collections, purchased from the annual parliamentary grant or acquired by donation or bequest. The Department contains upwards of 48,000 volumes; 65,000 charters and rolls; nearly 15,000 detached seals and casts of seals; and over 800 ancient Greek and Latin papyri. A list of the principal benefactors to the Department is given at the end of the Guide.

The selection exhibited to the public* is, roughly speaking, divided into four classes: historical (pp. 9, 90), literary (p. 52), palæographical (p. 75), and artistic (p. 119). The first two classes mainly consist of autographs; the third exemplifies the progress of writing from the third century before Christ to the fifteenth century of our era; and the fourth comprises manuscripts of the tenth to the sixteenth centuries embellished internally by the illuminator and miniaturist, or externally with ornamental bindings. Many of the examples, however, in each class present other elements of interest; and special mention may be made of the "Early Biblical Manuscripts" (p. 109), including the famous "Codex Alexandrinus."

The contents of the first four cases are intended to illustrate the course of English history by a selection of autograph letters and other original documents. They begin (p. 9) with a complete series of autographs of English sovereigns from Richard II. to Victoria, no signature or other handwriting of any earlier sovereign being known to exist. In the last compartment of the same case are also shown autographs of six of the most famous foreign sovereigns from the sixteenth to the nineteenth centuries. Further examples of English royal handwriting will be found in the general series of "Historical Autographs and Papers" in Cases II.-IV. (p. 18). This series begins in the reign of Henry VI., but the earlier periods receive illustration in the Charters exhibited in Cases V. and VI. (p. 38), and in the collection of English Chronicles in the central table-case F (p. 90). The documents are arranged in order of date, and, so far as the limits of space permit, the aim has been, by means of autograph letters, etc., of kings and queens, statesmen, naval and military commanders, ecclesiastics and others, to direct attention to the leading events and most eminent historical characters of each reign.

A few introductory remarks on some of the other classes will be found prefixed to them in their place in the Guide.

* For purposes of study and research the Students' Room is open to all persons provided with reading-tickets, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, with the exception of the first four week-days in March and September.

14. ELIZABETH. Draft of a speech from the throne on the occasion of the dissolution of Parliament [2 Jan. 1567], rating the members for their persistence in troubling her on the questions of the succession to the Crown and the liberties of Parliament: "Two visars have blinded the yees of the lokers one in this present session . . . and thes be the Succession and liberties. As to the first . . . it had bine convenient that so waighty a cause had had his originall from a zelous princes consideration, not from so lippe labored orations out of suche iangling [this word has been cancelled] subiects mouthes, wiche what the[y] be time may teache you knowe and ther demerites wyl make them acknowelege how the[y] have done ther lewde indeavour to make all my realme suppose that ther care was mucche whan myne was none at all . . . I think this be the first time that so waighty a cause passed from so simple mens mouthes as began this cause." After discriminating between various grades of aberration on the part of members, she concludes by advising them to "let this my displing [discipline] stand you in stede of sorar strokes never to tempt too far a princes paciens." A different version of the speech appears in Froude's History of England, vii. 484. Holograph [with signature from another document]. [Cotton Charter iv. 38 (2).]

15. JAMES I. Letter to Charles, Prince of Wales, ordering his return from Spain: "My dearest sonne, I sent you a comandement long agoe not to loose tyme quhaire ye are; but ather to bring quikelie hoame youre mistresse, quhiche is my earnist desyre; but if no bettir maye be, rather then to linger any longer thaire, to come without her, quhiche for manie important reasons I ame now forcid to renew. And thairfor I charge you upon my blessing to come quikelie ather with her or without her. I knowe your love to her person hath enforcid you to delaye the putting in execution of my former comandement. I confesse it is my cheifest wordlie ioye that ye love her, but the necessitie of my effaires enforcith me to tell you that ye muste præferre the obedience to a father to the love ye carrie to a mistresse. And so God blesse you. JAMES R." Dated, Cranborne, 10 Aug. [1623]. Holograph. [Harley MS. 6987, f. 143.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 7.

16. CHARLES I. Letter to his nephew, Prince Maurice, stating that he has been obliged to dismiss his brother, Prince Rupert, from all his commands in the army, in consequence of his surrender of Bristol [11 Sept. 1645], but adding: "Yet I assure you that I am most confident that this great Error of his (which, indeed, hath given me more Greefe then any Misfortune since this damnable Rebellion) hath no waise proceeded from his change of Affection to me or my Cause, but meerly by having his Iudgement seduced by some rotten-harted Villaines, making faire pretentions to him; and I am resolved so litle to forgett his former Services, that, whensoever it shall please God to enable me to looke upon my Friends lyke a King, he shall thanke God for the paines he hath spent in my Armys." Dated, Newtoun [co. Montgomery], 20 Sept. 1645. Holograph. [Harley MS. 6988, f. 190.] Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 9.

17. HENRIETTA MARIA, QUEEN OF CHARLES I. Letter to her son Charles [afterwards Charles II.], chiding him "because I heere that you will not take phisike," and threatening that, if he will not take it to-morrow, "I must come to you and make you take it." Lord Newcastle, his Governor, is to send word that night whether the physic has been taken [compare the following letter, no. 18]. Undated [about 1638]. Holograph. [Harley MS. 6988, f. 95.]

18. CHARLES II., AS PRINCE. Letter to the Marquess of Newcastle, advising him not to take too much physic, "for it doth allwaies make me worse, and I think it will do the like with you." Undated [about 1638]. Holograph. [Harley MS. 6988, f. 101.]

19. OLIVER CROMWELL. Letter to his wife, referring to their daughter Bettie [Elizabeth Claypole] and other members of their family: "I praise the Lord I am encreased in strength in my outward man, but that will not satisfie mee except I gett a heart to love and serve my heavenly Father better and gett more of the light of his countenance, which is better then life, and more power over my corruptions . . . Minde poore Bettie of the Lords late great mercye. Oh, I desire her not only to seeke

- the Lord in her necessitye, but indeed and in truth to turne to the Lord and to keepe close to him," etc. Dated, [Edinburgh], 12 Apr. 1651. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2620, f. 9.]
20. CHARLES II. Letter to Sir George Downing, English Ambassador at the Hague, giving instructions for his conduct: "I have thought fitt to send you my last minde upon the hinge of your whole negotiation and in my owne hand, that you may likewise know it is your part to obey punctually my orders, instead of putting yourselfe to the trouble of finding reasons why you do not do so. . . . But upon the whole matter you must allwaies know my minde and resolution is, not only to insist upon the haveing my flag saluted even on there very shoare (as it was alwaies practised) but in haveing my dominion of these seas asserted, and Van Guent exemplarily punished." Dated, Whitehall, 16 Jan. 167½. Holograph. [Stowe MS. 142, f. 84.]
21. JAMES II. Letter to William Henry, Prince of Orange, referring to the complicity of certain of the magistrates of Amsterdam in the Duke of Monmouth's rebellion, whose names he would transmit: "When I can gett any authentike proffs against them, I shall lett you have it, which I feare will be hard to be gott, tho tis certaine some of them knew of the D[uke] of Mon[mouth's] designe." Dated, Windsor, 25 Aug. 1685. Holograph. [Add. MS. 28,103, f. 68.]
22. WILLIAM III. Letter, in French, to the Prince de Vaudemont, touching on the prospects of the campaign and the progress of the siege of Namur: "L'on va ouvrir la trenchée cette nuit du coste de St^e Nicola," etc. Dated, "Au Camp devant Namur, ce 11^e de Juilliet, 1695, au soir a 9 eures." Holograph. [Add. MS. 21,493, f. 5.]
23. MARY II. Letter to the Countess of Scarborough, announcing the news of the battle of Steinkirk [24 July, 1692]: "The first I asked after when y^e news of y^e batle came was your Lord and, finding him not mentioned in any of y^e leters, take it for y^e best signe, for there is an exact account come, so much as of y^e Lieutenants of y^e gards who are eithere wounded or kild, by which, tho you shoud hapen to have no leter, yet you may be sure he is well. I thank God y^e King is so, and, tho we have got no victory, yet y^e french have had an equal losse, so y^t thay need not brag. We have great reason to thank God for thus much. . . . Your affectionate kind friend, MARIE R. The batle was fought Sunday last, from 9 till 6." Dated, Kensington, 29 July, 1692, "12 at night." Holograph. [Add. MS. 20,731, f. 6.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 11.
24. ANNE. Letter to the Marquess of Tweeddale [Lord High Commissioner to the Parliament of Scotland], regretting the failure of his negotiations with the Scotch Parliament for the settlement of the succession to the Crown of Scotland, and expressing her intention of not employing those for the future who have opposed and obstructed his endeavours for her service,

- Dated, Windsor, 24 July, 1704. Holograph [with signature from another letter]. [Stowe MS. 142, f. 99.] Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 12.
25. GEORGE I. Letter, in French, to the Emperor Charles VI. on the occasion of sending Abraham Stanian as Ambassador to Constantinople. Dated, Hampton Court, 17 Oct., 1717. Holograph. [Add. MS. 22,046, f. 48.]
26. GEORGE II. Letter to Thomas Pelham-Holles, Duke of Newcastle, on the formation of the Ministry, which the Duke had undertaken after the dismissal of Pitt from office [6 April, 1757]: "If Pitt will come in with a great number of followers, it is impossible you can direct the Administration, and I know that by inclination he will distress my affairs abroad, which are so enough already." Dated, 4 June, [1757]. Holograph. Eventually Pitt returned to office as Secretary of State under Newcastle, and the victories of the Seven Years War were the result. [Add. MS. 32,684, f. 100.] Presented, in 1886, by the Earl of Chichester. Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 13.
27. GEORGE III. Paragraph written out by himself for insertion in his first Speech from the Throne:—"Born and educated in this country, I glory in the name of Britain; and the peculiar happiness of my life will ever consist in promoting the welfare of a people whose loyalty and warm affection to me I consider as the greatest and most permanent security of my Throne." [15 Nov. 1760.] Holograph. [Add. MS. 32,684, f. 121.] Presented, in 1886, by the Earl of Chichester. Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 16.

(FOREIGN.)

32. CHARLES V., Emperor [1519-1555]. Letter, in French, to Queen Mary of England, expressing his desire to see his son Philip, her husband [to whom he was on the point of resigning the crown of Spain]. He refers to delays in the necessary arrangements, but adds that he has now instructed Philip to hasten his journey from England: "Je luy ay escrit pour haster sa venue, laquelle je vous prie tres affectueusement vouloyr auoyr agreable"; and apologises for depriving her of Philip's company, "puis que je voys le contentment que vous aves dicelle, mays jespere que vous vous y acomederes, puis que ce sera, sil plait a Dieu, pour peu de tamps." [1555.] Holograph. Signed, "Votre bon pere, frere, cousin et alye, CHARLES." [Cotton MS. Titus B. ii. f. 126.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 16.
33. HENRY IV., King of Navarre and France [1589-1610]. Letter, in French, to Mons. de Turenne, announcing his departure for La Rochelle and the expected attack on Mauléon by the Duc de Nevers. [? October, 1588.] Holograph. Signed, "Votre tresafectyoné cousyn et parfayt amy, HENRY." [Add. MS. 19,272, f. 53.]
34. LOUIS XIV., King of France [1643-1715]. Letter, in French, to Mary of Modena, Queen of James II., congratulating her on the birth of a prince [James Edward, afterwards known as the Pretender]: "J'ai souhaité si ardemment l'heureuse naissance du prince dont vous venes d'accoucher que j'oze dire que personne n'en sauroit avoir plus de joye que moy rien n'est plus veritable que la part que prend a tout ce qui vous touche vostre bon frere, Louis." Dated, Versailles, 24 June, 1688. Holograph. [Add. MS. 28,225, f. 279.]
35. PETER THE GREAT, Czar of Russia [1682-1725]. Letter, in Russian, to Mr. Noy, ship-builder, in St. Petersburg, instructing him to put a ship in order "so as she came from England," with postscript, "I desire you will pay my compliments to all our fellow ship-builders and the rest." Dated, Colomna, 16 May, 1722. Holograph. Signed, "PETER." [Add. MS. 5015*, f. 98.]
36. FREDERIC THE GREAT, King of Prussia [1740-1786]. Essay, in French, on the military talents of Charles XII., King of Sweden, sent by Frederic, in July, 1757, to Andrew Mitchell, English Ambassador at Berlin in 1756-1763. Among the concluding passages are: "Si lon raproche les diferent traits qui caracterisent ce Monarque singuiller, on le trouvera plus vaillant qu'habile, plus actif que prudent, plus soumi a ses passions qu'ataché a ses interets, ausi audacieux, mais moins russé, qu'Hanibal, tenant plus de Pirhus que d'Allexsandre, ausi brillant que Condé a Rocroy, a Norlingue, a Fribour, en aucun tems ausi admirable que Turene la journée de Guin, cela de Colmar et durant ses dernieres campagnes. . . . Pour former un parfait capitaine il faudroit qu'il reunit la valeur, la constance, l'activité de Charles XII., le coup d'œil et la politique de Malbouroug, les projets, les ressources, et les expédients du prince Eugene, les ruses de Luxsenbourg, la prudence, la sagesse, la metode de Montecuculi, et l'apropos de monsieur de Turene. Mais je crains que ce beau fenix ne paraitra jamais." Ends "Finis operi Federicum." Holograph. [Add. MS. 6845, f. 15.] Facsimile in Ser. ii., no. 16.

37. NAPOLEON I., Emperor of the French [1804-1815]. Letter to his brother, Joseph Bonaparte, in Paris, written while in command of the French expedition in Egypt, the victories of which had been sufficiently disputed "to add a leaf to the military glory of this army." He expresses, however, his intention of returning to France in two months, and of retiring to the country in disgust with the world: "Je suis annuié de la nature humaine! J'ai besoin de solitude et d'isolement; la grandeur m'annuie, le sentiment est deseché, la gloire est fade; a 29 ans j'ai tout epuisé; il ne me reste plus qu'à devenir bien vraiment egoiste." Dated, Cairo, 7 Thermidor [25 July, 1798]. Holograph, without signature, but with seal bearing the inscription, "Bonaparte general en chef." A week later the French fleet was destroyed by Nelson in the battle of the Nile; the letter was intercepted, and is endorsed in Nelson's hand, "Found on the person of the Courier." [Add. MS. 23,003, f. 3.] Facsimile in Ser. ii., no. 17.

HISTORICAL AUTOGRAPHS AND PAPERS.

38. HENRY VI. Articles "For ye goode Reule, demesnyng, and seuretee of ye kynges persone and draught of him to vertue and connyng and eschuyng of eny thing that mighte yeve empeschement or let thereto, or cause eny charge, defaulte or blame to be leyd upon ye Erle of Warrewyk [Richard de Beauchamp] at eny tyme withouten his desert": being a series of proposals made by the Earl, as Royal Guardian, to the Privy Council, with their answers to the same; 29 Nov. 11 Henr. VI. [1432]. The king was just completing his eleventh year. The fourth article is to the effect that, as the king's growth in years, in stature and in knowledge of his royal authority "causen him more and more to grucche with chastising and to lothe it," the Earl begs the Council to support him, if necessary, in his chastisement of his pupil, and to bear him scatheless against his anger. At the foot are the signatures of the Council;—H[umphrey Plantagenet, Duke of] Gloucester; J[ohn Kemp, Archbishop of] York; P[hilip Morgan, Bishop of] Ely; W[illiam Grey, Bishop of] Lincoln; J[ohn Stafford, Bishop of] Bath, Chancellor; J[ohn Langdon, Bishop of] Rochester; J[ohn Holland, Earl of] Huntingdon; [William de la Pole, Earl of] Suffolk; and H[umphrey Stafford, Earl of] Stafford. [Add. Ch. 17,228.]
39. PERKIN WARBECK, pretended son of Edward IV. Letter to Barnard de la Force, Knt., at Fontarabia, in Spain, desiring him to be his "counseillour and ffrende," as he had been to his father Edward IV. Dated, Edinburgh, 18 Oct. [1496]. Signed, "Your frend RYCHARD OFF ENGLAND." [Egerton MS. 616, f. 5.]
40. CARDINAL WOLSEY [b. 1471—d. 1530]. Letter written after his disgrace to Stephen [Gardiner, afterwards Bishop of Winchester], making arrangements respecting appointments in the province of York, and continuing, "that sythyngs in thys and all other thynges I have and do moste obedyently submyt and conforme my sylf to hys graces pleasure," he trusts "yt wole now please his maieste to shewe hys pety, compassyon, and bowntuose goodnes towardes me without sufferynge me any leynger to lye langwyshyng and consumyng away throwth thys myn extreme sorowe and hevynes." "Wryttyne at Asher [Esher] thys twysday [9 March, 1530] with the rude hand of your dayly bedysman, T[OMAS] CARDINALIS EBOR." Holograph. [Add. MS. 25,114, f. 28.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 3.

41. SIR THOMAS MORE [b. 1480—d. 1535]. Letter to Henry VIII., reminding him that "at such tyme as of that great weighty rome and office of your chauncellour . . . ye were so good and graciouse unto me as, at my pore humble suit, to discharge and disburden me, geving me licence with your graciouse favour to bestow the residew of my life, in myn age now to come, abowt the provision for my soule in the service of God," he had the promise of his favour; and now praying "that of your accustomed goodnes no sinistre information move your noble grace to have eny more distruste of my trowth and devotion toward you than I have or shall duryng my life geve the cause"; that in the matter of "the wykked woman of Canterbury" [Elizabeth Barton, the Maid of Kent] he had declared the truth to Cromwell; that, if the King believes him guilty, he is ready to forfeit life and fortune, his compensation being that, "I shold onys mete with your grace agayn in hevyn and there be mery with you," but that, if the King thinks that he has acted according to duty, he will relieve him from the Bill brought against him in Parliament. Dated, "at my pore howse in Chelchith" [Chelsea], 5 March [1534]. Holograph. [Cotton MS. Cleopatra E. vi. f. 176.] Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 1.

42. HENRY VIII. Instructions to the Commissioners for making a survey and valuation of all Church property within the realm. [Jan. 1535]. With autograph signature of the King. This survey, known as the 'Valor Ecclesiasticus,' was made in pursuance of the acts of Parliament forbidding the payment of first-fruits and tithes of benefices to the Pope, and granting them to the King. It also served as a basis for the subsequent dissolution of the smaller monasteries in 1536 and the larger in 1538, and the confiscation of their property to the Crown. [Cotton MS. Cleopatra E. iv. f. 200.]

43. THOMAS CRANMER, Archbishop of Canterbury [b. 1489—d. 1556]. Letter to [Thomas, Lord Cromwell], thanking him "that your Lordeship at my requeste hath not only exhibited the Bible [in English, known as Matthew's Bible] which I sent unto you to the Kinges maiestie, but also hath obteigned of his grace that the same shalbe alowed by his auctoritie to be bowghte and redde within this realme . . . assuryng your Lordeship for the contentacion of my mynde you have shewid me more pleasour herin than yf you hadd given me a thowsande pownde." Dated, Ford, 13 Aug. [1537]. Signed, "Your own bowndman ever, T. CANTUARIEN." [Cotton MS. Cleopatra E. v. f. 348.] Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 2.

44. EPISCOPAL DECLARATION, recognising the authority of Christian princes in ecclesiastical matters; [1537]. Signed by T[homas Cranmer], Archbishop of Canterbury; Cuthbert [Tunstall], Bishop of Durham; John [Stokesley], Bishop of London; John [Clerk], Bishop of Bath and Wells; Thomas [Goodrich], Bishop of Ely; Nicholas [Shaxton], Bishop of Salisbury; Hugh [Latimer], Bishop of Worcester; and J[ohn Hilsey], Bishop of Rochester. [Stowe MS. 141, f. 36.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 4.
45. HUGH LATIMER, Bishop of Worcester [b. 1485?—d. 1555]. Arguments against the doctrine of purgatory, with autograph annotations by Henry VIII. in the margin. The greater part of the treatise consists of arguments derived from passages in the Fathers; the concluding paragraph, here exhibited, is an argumentum ad hominem: "The fowndyng of monastarys arguyd purgatory to be, so y^e pullyng of them down arguyth it nott to be. Whatt uncharitabulnesse and cruellnes semyth it to be to destrowe monasterys yf purgatory be. Now it semyth natt conveyentt the acte of parliament to prech won thyng and the pulpyd another clean contrary." On which the King comments, "Why then do yow so? turpe enim est doctori cum culpa rederguit eum." [About 1538.] Holograph. [Cotton MS. Cleopatra E. v. f. 142.] Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 3.
46. HENRY VIII. The King's Book, or "Necessary Doctrine for a Christian Man"; published in 1543, being a revision by Henry of the Bishops' Book, or "Institution of a Christian Man," published in 1537. The draft is in a secretary's hand, with autograph corrections by Henry. The passage exhibited relates to the claims of the Papacy (the words printed in italics being those inserted by Henry himself): "Herby it may appere that the busshop of Rome contrary to Goddes lawes doth chalenge superioritie and preeminence over all, and to make an apparence that itt shuld be so hath and dothe wrest Scripture for that porpose contrary bothe to the trw menyng off the same and the auncyent doctors interpretations of the chyrche, so that by that chalenge he wolde nott do wrong wonly to this chyrche off England but also to all other chyrchys in claymeyng superioryte w^t ought any auctoryte by God so to hym gyffen." [Cotton MS. Cleopatra E. v. f. 34.]
47. EDWARD VI. Letter of the King and his Council to the Bishops, in confirmation of the use of the Book of Common Prayer, and ordering them to collect and "deface and abholysh" all the old service-books. Dated, Westminster, 25 Dec. a^o 3 [1549]. Signed at the top, "EDWARD." [Stowe MS. 142, f. 16.]
48. EDWARD VI. Diary of his reign, written with his own hand, the page exhibited including: "18 [March, 1551]. The L[ady] Mary my sister came to me to Whestmuster, wheare after salutacions she was called with my counsel into a chambre, where was declared how long i had suffered her masse against my will [erased] in hope of her reconciliation, and how now being no hope, wich i perceived by her lettres, except i saw some short amendement, i could not beare it. She answerid that her soul was God[’s] and her faith she wold not chaung, nor dissemble hir opinion with contrary doinges. It was said i constrained not her faith, but willed her not as a king to rule but as a subject to obey. And that her exauple might breed to much inconvenience. 19. Th’ emperours embassadour came with short messag frome his master of warre, if i wold not suffre his cosin the princesse to use hir masse. To this was no aundswer given at this time.” Holograph. [Cotton MS. Nero C. x. f. 30 b.] Facsimile in Ser i. no. 4.

49. LADY JANE GREY. Letter from her, as Queen, to [William Parr] Marquess of Northampton, Lord Lieutenant of Surrey, etc., announcing her entry into possession of the kingdom of England, and requiring his allegiance against the “fayned and untrew clayme of the Lady Marye, bastard daughter to our greate uncle Henry th’ eight.” Dated, from the Tower, 10 July, “the first yere of our reign” [1553]. Signed, “JANE THE QUENE.” [Lansdowne MS. 1236, f. 24.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 4.

50. QUEEN MARY. Order of her adherents to Sir N. Pelham and to “all other the gentilmen of the Shere of Sussexx,” requiring them to proclaim her Queen in that county, and denouncing “the ladie Jane, a quene of a new and pretie invencion.” Dated, 19 July [1553]. Signed by Henry [Neville], Lord Abergavenny, [Sir] T[homas] Wyat, and others. [Add. MS. 33,230, f. 21.] Presented, in 1887, by the Earl of Chichester. Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 5.

51. SIR PHILIP SIDNEY [b. 1554—d. 1586]. Letter to [Lord Burghley?] on the condition of his garrison of Flushing: “The garrison is weak, the people by thes cross fortunes crossly disposed; and this is y^e conclusion: if these 2 places be kept, her Ma^{ty} hath worth her monei in all extremities; if thei shoold be lost, none of the rest wold hold a dai.” Dated, Flushing, 14 Aug. 1586 [about five weeks before his mortal wound in the battle of Zutphen, on 22 Sept.]. Holograph. [Stowe MS. 150, f. 50.]

52. MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS. Letter, in French, to Queen Elizabeth, complaining of the rigour of her imprisonment: “Bien que je ne veuille vous importuner de ce qui concerne mon estat, laquelle conoissant vous ettre si peu chere je remets a la misericorde de Dieu . . . je vous priay aussi (a ce forcee par le zelle de ma consience) de me permettre avvoir ung prestre de lesglise catolique, de la quelle je suis membre, pour me consoller et sollisiter de mon devvoyr; lesquelles resquestes acordees, je priay Dieu et en prison et en mourant de rendre vottre cueur tel qui luy puisse estre agreable et a vous salutayre, et si j’en suis refeeusee je vous laysse la charge den respondre devvant Dieu. . . . Il me reste encores vous fayre une autre resqueste de peu d’importance pour vous et dextresme consolation pour moy, cest quil vous playse, ayant pitiai dune desolee mere d’entre les bras de qui on a arasché son seul enfant et esperance de

- future joye en ce monde, me permetre decrire a tout le moings lettres ouvertes pour m'enquerir a la veritay de ces nouvelles et luy ramentevoir sa triste mere." Dated, "de mon estroite prison de Chefield" [Sheffield], 29 Oct. [1571]. Holograph. Signed, "Votre bien bonne sœur et [cousine] MARIE R." [Cotton MS. Caligula C. iii. f. 239 b.] Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 5.
53. WILLIAM CECIL, LORD BURGHLEY [b. 1520—d. 1598]. Letter to Sir Christopher Hatton concerning the trial of Anthony Babington for conspiring to assassinate Queen Elizabeth and release Mary, Queen of Scots, delivering Elizabeth's pleasure with regard to the evidence to be given as to the complicity of Mary, namely "that ther be no enlargement of hir cryme, butt breffly declared for mayntenance of the endyttment that she allowed of Babyngtons wrytyng or lettre; nether wold she that ether by my L. Cobham, your self, or by any other, any sharp speches be used in condemnation or reprooff of the Scotts Quene cryme." Dated, 12 Sept. [1586], the day before the trial. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2124, f. 30.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 5.
54. MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS. Rough sketch by Lord Burghley of the arrangement of the hall of Fotheringhay Castle for the Queen's trial, on 12 Oct. 1586, the "chayre for y^e Q. of Scotts" being placed in the centre just above a dividing rail across the hall. [Cotton MS. Calig. C. ix. f. 587.]
55. JAMES VI. of Scotland. Letter to Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, congratulating him on his absence from England at the time of "the pretendit condemnation" of his mother, Mary, Queen of Scots, and desiring him to exert his influence that "the rest of this tragedie may be unperfytid." Dated, Holyrood House, 4 Dec. 1586. Holograph. [Add. MS. 32,092, f. 56.]
56. MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS. An account of her execution at Fotheringhay, 8 Feb. 158⁶/₇, sent to Lord Burghley and endorsed by him "The manner of y^e Q. of Scotts deth at Fodrynghay, wr[itten] by Ro[bert] Wy[ngfield]." The final scene is thus described: "Then lying upon the blocke most quietly and stretching out her armes [she] cryed, 'In manus tuas Domine,' etc., three or fowre tymes, then she lying very still on the blocke, one of the executioners holding of her slitley with one of his handes, she endured two strokes of the other executioner with an axe, she making very smale noyse or none at all, and not stirring any parte of her from the place where she lay . . . Then one of the executioners espied her litle dogg which was crept under her clothes, which could not be gotten forth but by force, yet afterward wold not departe from the dead corpes but came and lay betweene her head and her shoulders." [Lansdowne MS. 51, ff. 99-102.]
57. THE SPANISH ARMADA. Resolution of a Council of War of the English commanders, after the defeat of the Armada off Gravelines: "1 Augusti, 1588. We whose names are herunder written have determyned and agreeede in counsaile to folowe and pursue the Spanishe Fleete untill we have cleared oure owne coaste and broughte the Frithe weste of us, and then to returne backe againe, as well to revictuall oure ships (which stand in extreme scarsitie) as alsoe to guard and defend oure owne coaste at home; with further protestatione that, if oure wantes of victualles and munitione were suppliede, we wold pursue them to the furthest that they durste have gone." Signed by C[harles Howard, Lord] Howard [of Effingham, Lord High Admiral], George [Clifford, Earl of] Cumberland, [Lord] T[homas] Howard, Edmund [Sheffield, Lord] Sheffield, [Sir] Francis Drake, [Sir] Edward Hoby, [Sir] John Hawkins, and [Capt.] Thomas Fenner. [Add. MS. 33,740, f. 6.] Facsimile in Ser. i, no. 6.

58. SIR WALTER RALEGH [b. 1552?—d. 1618]. Letter to Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, Governor of the Low Countries for Queen Elizabeth, protesting his zeal in the performance of his commissions: "But I have byn of late very pestilent reported in this place, to be rather a drawer bake then a fartherer of the action wher yow govern. Your Lordshipe doth well understand my affection towards Spayn and how I have consumed the best part of my fortune hating the tirranus sprosperety of that estate, and it were now strang and mounsterous that I should becum an enemy to my countrey and conscience . . . In the mean tyme I humble beseich yow lett no poetically scribe worke your Lordshipe by any device to doubt that I am a hollo or could sarvant to the action, or a mean wellwiller and follower of your own." Dated, "from the Court," 29 March, 1586. In a postscript Raleigh adds, "The Queen is in very good tearms with yow, and, thank be to God, well pacified, and yow ar agayne her sweet Robyn." Holograph. [Harley MS. 6994, f. 2.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 6.

59. SIR FRANCIS DRAKE [b. 1540—d. 1596] and SIR JOHN HAWKINS [b. 1520—d. 1595]. Letter to Lord Burghley on the eve of their departure on their last voyage, the expedition against Porto Rico: "We humbly thanke your lordship for your manyfold favours, which we have allwayes fownd never varyable, but with all favour, love, and constancye, for which we can never be suffycyently thankfull, but with our prayers to God long to blesse your good lordship with honour and hellthe. . . . And so loking daylye for a good wynd, we humbly take our leve." Dated, Plymouth, 18 Aug. 1595. Neither returned from this voyage, Hawkins dying off Porto Rico on 11 Nov. 1595, and Drake off Porto Bello on 28 Jan. 1596. Autograph signatures. [Harley MS. 4762, f. 84.]

Case III.

[Immediately opposite Case II.]

60. SIR FRANCIS BACON [b. 1561—d. 1626]. Letter to Lord Keeper Puckering, with reference to the office of Solicitor-General, which he was anxious to obtain: "Thear hath nothing happened to me in the course of my busines more contrary to my expectacion then your L[ordship] failing me and crossing me now in the conclusion when frendes are best tryed. . . . And I for my part thowgh I have much to alledg, yet neverthesse, if I see her Ma[jesty] settle her choise upon an able man, such a one as Mr. Sergeaunt Flemyng, I will make no means to alter it. On the other side, if I perceyve any insufficient obscure idole man offred to her Ma[jesty], then I thinke my self dowble bownd to use the best meanes I can for my self, which I humbly pray your L[ordship] I may do with your favour." Dated, Gray's Inn, 28 July, 1595. Holograph. Fleming was appointed, and Bacon did not become Solicitor-General until 1607. [Harley MS. 6997, f. 72.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 6.

61. QUEEN ELIZABETH. Letter to James VI. of Scotland [afterwards James I. of England], vehemently repelling some charges brought against her policy by the King of Spain, and warning him against believing them. She begins, "Hit pleaseth me not a litel that my true intentz without glosis or giles ar by you so gratefully taken, for I am nothings of the vile disposition of suche as while ther neighbors house is or likly to be afire wyl not only not helpe but not afourd them water to quenche the same"; and ends, "Thus you se how, to fulfil your trust reposed in me, wiche to infring I never mynde, I have sincerely made patente my sinceritie, and thogh not fraught with much wisdomes yet stuffed with great good wyl. I hope you wyl beare with my molesting you to long with my skrating hand, as proceeding from a hart that shall ever be filled with the sure affection of your loving and frendely sistar, ELIZABETH." [5 Jan. 1603, two months before her death.] Holograph. [Add. MS. 18,738, f. 39.] Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 7.

62. ROBERT CECIL, EARL OF SALISBURY, Secretary of State [b. 1550—d. 1612]. Letter to Sir T. Edmondes, ambassador at Brussels, giving a detailed account of the discovery of the Gunpowder Plot, "the most cruell and detestable practize against the person of his Majestie and the whole Estate of this Realme that ever was conceived by the harte of man, at any time, or in any place whatsoever. . . . The person that was the principall undertaker of it is one Johnson" [the assumed name of Guy Fawkes] "a Yorkshire man and serviant to one Thomas Percy. . . . I must needs do the Lord Chamberlain" [the Earl of Suffolk] "his right, that hee would take noe satisfaction untill hee might search to the bottome, wherein I must confesse I was lesse forward, not but that I had sufficient advertisement that most of those that now are fled had some practize in hande for some sturre this parliament, but I never dreamed it should have bin of such a nature, because I never red nor heard the like in any state to be attempted in grosse, without some distinction of persons." Dated, Whitehall, 9 Nov. 1605. Autograph signature. [Stowe MS. 168, f. 213.]

63. ARABELLA STUART. Letter to her cousin James I., after her arrest for marrying William Seymour, thanking him for a relaxation of her imprisonment and begging for his favour: "And since it hath pleased your Majesty to give this testimony of willingnesse to have me live a while, in all humility I begge the restitution of those comforts without which every houre of my life is discomfortable to me, the principall whearof is your Majestys favour, which none that breathes can more highly esteeme then I." [1610.] Holograph. [Harley MS. 7003, f. 89.]
64. THOMAS WENTWORTH, VISCOUNT WENTWORTH, afterwards EARL OF STRAFFORD [b. 1593—d. 1641]. Letter, as Lord Deputy of Ireland, to the Earl of Carlisle, explaining his difficulties, arising from the attempts of his subordinates to keep all knowledge from him: "I am purposed on the other side to open my eyes as wide as I can, and dispaire not in time to be able to sounde the depthe they covett soe much to reserve from me. . . . I shall be sure to doe the uttermost that lies in me, for I have a hartte can willingly sacrifice all that ever I have for his Majesty (if I doe not deceave myself) with a chearfullnesse and faithe extraordinary, only I am fearefull that, whilst impossibilities are expected at my hands, the best I can doe should not be accepted, nay imputed unto me as a crime." Dated, Dublin, 27 Aug. 1633. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2597, f. 150.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 8.
65. WILLIAM LAUD, Archbishop of Canterbury [b. 1573—d. 1645]. Letter to Lord Conway, with reference to the Scotch invasion: "If the Scotts come into England and that Newecastle be taken, I will not dare to wright what I thinke of y^e busynes. But if they gett such footing in y^e North, the South beinge affected, or rather infected, as they ar, it may prove that which I beleeve y^e Enimye yett expects not. . . . God send us well out of these darke tymes." Dated, Croydon, 14 Aug. 1640. Holograph. [Add. MS. 21,406, f. 13.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 7.
66. CHARLES I. Instructions to Sir Edward Herbert, Attorney-General, relative to the impeachment of Lord Kimbolton [Viscount Mandeville] and the Five Members [3 Jan. 164 $\frac{1}{2}$]. Holograph. It is evident that Mandeville's impeachment was an afterthought, the King having at first, as appears from the erasures, included his name among the peers whom he intended to call as witnesses. [Egerton MS. 2546, f. 20.] Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 8.
67. EDWARD HYDE, afterwards EARL OF CLARENDON [b. 1608—d. 1674]. Letter to the Countess of Carnarvon, on the eve of the Civil War, urging her to secure the adhesion of an unnamed person (probably her father, the Earl of Pembroke) to the royal cause: "Tis not possible for me to say more in the argument to him then I have, nor can I imagyne what ill spiritt can engage him thus to venture his fortune and his fame, his honour and the honour of his house, in a vessell where none but desperate persons have the goverment. . . . I know not what argument they have at London for ther confidence, but truly they seeme to have very few frendes in these partes, and I doe not thinke ther condicion is much better in other places. . . . I am not yet out of hope of kisseinge your Ladyshyps handes before the summer endes." Dated, Nottingham, 22 July, 1642. Holograph. [Stowe MS. 142, f. 47.]

68. JOHN HAMPDEN [b. 1594—d. 1643]. Letter to Colonel Bulstrode and others commanding parliamentary troops, written a few days after the battle of Edgehill [23 Oct.], which was followed by the retreat of the Parliamentarian army: "The army is now at North Hampton, moving every day nearer to you. If you disband not, wee may be a mutuall succour, each to other; but, if you disperse, you make yourselves and your country a pray." Dated, Northampton, 31 Oct. [1642]. [Stowe MS. 142, f. 49.] Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 8.

69. JOHN PYM [b. 1584—d. 1643]. Letter to Sir Thomas Barrington, on the fall of Bristol and the efforts being made to save Gloucester: "It is true that Bristow is a great loss, and may endanger all the west if not quickly prevented, and therefor wee use all the meanes we can to raise a considerable army to send into those partes. . . . In the North, God be thanckd, matters goe reasonable prosperously. Col. Cromwell in the taking of Burlye House [Burghley House, in Lincolnshire] took 5 troups of Horse, 3 of Dragoones, 3 compaynes of foot. Since that they have beaten Generall Kings forces before Gainsboroughe, and if my L[ord] of Newcastles whole army had not come upon them in the very instant, they had had a more compleat victory. Wee are studiying all the ways we can to save Gloucester, Exeter and the other western townes now in danger upon the loss of Bristowe." Dated, Westminster, 2 Aug. 1643 [four months before his death]. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2643, f. 13, b.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 9.

70. JAMES GRAHAM, MARQUESS OF MONTROSE [b. 1612—d. 1650]. Letter to Lord Fairfax, with reference to an exchange of prisoners: "Mr. Darly being ane parlament man and on that hitherto hes beane much employed and very usefull to your party, and the other only in the degree of a cornell, bot admitt of the odes [i.e. odds], iff your l[ordship] will dispeut it, the difference shall be maide up. Iff otherwayes you will be rather gallantly pleased to make it a curtesye, ane very thankfull and acceptable returne shall, I hope, (er long) be randered your l[ordship]." Dated, 22 July, 1644. Holograph. [Sloane MS. 1519, f. 78.]

71. OLIVER CROMWELL. Letter to William Lenthall, Speaker of the House of Commons, reporting the victory of Naseby: "Wee after 3 howers fight, very doubtful, att last routed his [the King's] Armie, killed and tooke about 5000, very many officers, but of what quallitye wee yett know not, wee tooke alsoe about

I am commanded by you to this quaint you with the good hand of God towards you, and us. We marched yesterday after the King who went before us from Barenten to Haurabrow, and quartered about six miles from him, this day we marched towards him, Her Deser out to meet us, both Armies engaged, we after 3. hours fight, very doubtless at last routed his Armies, killed and took about 5000. very many officers but of what quality we yett know not, we took also about 200. canons all he had, and all his gunns, being 12 in number, whereof 2. were brass cannon, 2. were Calumngos, and 4. of the rest Sacres, we pursued him from three miles short of Ha-to nine beyond, even to sight of Leis whether the King fled. Be this is now

96. WILLIAM, DUKE OF CUMBERLAND [b. 1721—d. 1765]. Letter to Sir John Ligonier, with reference to the battle of Culloden, etc.: "Yesterday I received your kind congratulations on our Victory.

Would to God the enemy had been worthy enough for our troops. Sure never were Soldiers in such a temper. Silence and Obedience the whole time and all our Manœuvres were perform'd without the least confusion. I must own that [you] have hit my weak side when you say that the Honour of our troops is restored. That pleases beyond all the Honours done me." Dated, Inverness, May, 1746. Holograph. [Stowe MS. 142, f. 113.]

97. HENRY BENEDICT STUART, afterwards CARDINAL OF YORK [b. 1725—d. 1807], the last of the Stuarts. 99. ROBERT CLIVE, afterwards LORD CLIVE [b. 1725—d. 1774]. Letter to the Duke of Newcastle, as First Lord of the Treasury, reporting his recovery of Calcutta [after the tragedy of the Black Hole, 21 June, 1756] and defeat of the Nawâb's army (50,000 strong) with a force of 600 Europeans and 800 natives: "A little before day break wee entred the camp and received a very brisk fire. This did not stop the progress of our Troops, which march'd thro' the enemy's camp upwards of 4 miles in length. Wee were more then 2 hours in passing, and what escaped the Van was destroyd by the Rear . . ." Dated, "Camp near Calcutta," 23 Feb. 1757. Holograph. [Add. MS. 32,870, f. 216.] Presented, in 1886, by the Earl of Chichester. Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 12.
100. WILLIAM PITT, afterwards EARL OF CHATHAM [b. 1708—d. 1778]. Letter to the Duke of Newcastle, complaining of the concealment from him of a correspondence between Major Gen. Joseph Yorke, Minister at the Hague, and an unknown lady at Paris, concerning proposals of peace, made in the course of the Seven Years War. The letter ends: "I acknowledge my unfitness for the high station where His Majesty has been pleased to place me, but while the King deigns to continue me there, I trust it is not presumption to lay myself at His Majesty's feet and most humbly request his gracious permission to retire, whenever His Majesty thinks it for his service to treat of a Peace in the vehicle of letters of amusement and to order his servants to conceal, under so thin a covering, the first dawns of informa-perity of this young & rising Country, can not but be gratefully received by all its citizens, and every lover of it. — One means to the contribution of which, and its happiness, is very judiciously portrayed in the following words of your letter "to "be little heard of in the great world of "Politics" These words I can assure your Lordship are expressive of my sentiments on this head; and I believe it is the sincere wish of United America to have nothing to do with the Political intrigues, or the squabbles of European Nations; but on the contrary, to exchange commodities & live in peace & amity with all the inhabitants of the earth; and this I am persuaded they will do, if rightfully it can be done. — To administer justice to, and receive it from every Power with whom they are connected with, I hope, he always found the most prominent feature in the Administration of this Country, and I flatter myself that ^{no part} of imperious necessity can occasion a breach with any of them. — Under such a system if we

102. WARREN HASTINGS, Governor-General of India [b. 1732—d. 1818]. Letter to his wife, referring to his duel with Mr. (afterwards Sir) Philip Francis, Member of the Council: "I have desired Sir John Day to inform you that I have had a meeting this morning with Mr. Francis, who has received a wound in his side, but I hope not dangerous. . . . I am well and unhurt. But you must be content to hear this good from me. You cannot see me. I cannot leave Calcutta while Mr. Francis is in any danger." Dated, Calcutta [17 Aug. 1780]. Holograph [with signature from another letter]. [Add. MS. 29,197, f. 13.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 14.
103. GEORGE WASHINGTON [b. 1732—d. 1799]. Letter to the Earl of Buchan, partly on the principle which should guide the United States, viz.: "to be little heard of in the great world of Politics." . . . "I believe it is the sincere wish of United America to have nothing to do with the Political intrigues or the squabbles of European nations; but, on the contrary, to exchange commodities and live in peace and amity with all the inhabitants of the earth; and this I am persuaded they will do, if rightfully it can be done. . . . To evince that our views are expanded, I take the liberty of sending you the Plan of a New City [i.e. Washington] situated about the centre of the Union of these States, which is designed for the permanent seat of the Government, and we are at this moment deeply engaged and far advanced in extending the inland navigation of the River (Potomac) on which it stands, and the branches thereof, through a tract of as rich country—for hundreds of miles—as any in the world." Dated, Philadelphia, 22 April, 1793. Holograph. [Add. MS. 12,099, f. 28.] Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 17.
104. WILLIAM PITT, the younger [b. 1759—d. 1806]. Letter to a member of his Cabinet [probably the Duke of Leeds], on the negotiations with the leaders of the French National Assembly, then being privately conducted by Mr. [afterwards Sir] Hugh Elliot: "I am in hopes you will think that it [a despatch to Elliot] steers quite clear of any thing like Cringing to France, which I agree with you ought to be avoided even in the present moment of their weakness, and certainly in all others." [October, 1790.] Holograph. [Add. MS. 33,964, f. 21.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 14.
105. EDMUND BURKE [b. 1730—d. 1797]. Letter to Bishop Douglas, asking advice as to the propriety of presenting a copy of a new work [the Appeal from the New to the Old Whigs] to the King, and commenting on affairs in France, with especial reference to the Queen, Marie Antoinette: "A worthy friend of mine at Paris writes me an account of the condition of the Queen of France, which makes it probable that the life of that persecuted Woman will not be long . . . What a lesson to the great and the little! How soon they pass from the state we admire and envy to that the most cruel must pity! I find I am preaching to a Bishop—but they are things and events that now preach, and not either Clergy or Laity." Dated, Margate, 31 July, 1791. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2182, f. 72.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 15.

106. CHARLES JAMES FOX [b. 1749 — d. 1806.] Letter to the Duchess of Leinster, relative to the petition against the bill of attainder of her son Lord Edward Fitzgerald, concluding with the words, "nor can anything make me have, I will not say a friendly, but even a patient feeling towards the Government of this country till his poor children are reinstated in their rights." Dated, Holkham, 21 Oct. [1798]. Holograph. [Add. MS. 30,990, f. 45.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 15.

107. RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN [b. 1751—d. 1816]. Notes for a speech in the House of Commons, on 30 April, 1805, charging Pitt with misapplication of the public money, in connection with the charge against Lord Melville. Holograph. [Add. MS. 29,964, f. 58.] Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 14.

108. SIR JOHN MOORE [b. 1761—d. 1809]. Letter, when Lieut.-Colonel Moore, to General Paoli, on his summary recall from Corsica: "I shall present myself to the King and to his Ministers with confidence, conscious of no conduct that deserves reproach—indeed I feel that I am incapable of an improper or unbecoming action. I hope the person who is the cause of my leaving Corsica [i.e. the viceroy, Gilbert Elliot, afterwards Earl of Minto] may upon his return be able to say as much." Dated, Corté, 6 Oct. 1795. Holograph. [Add. MS. 22,688, f. 114.]

109. CAROLINE, QUEEN OF GEORGE IV. Letter to the King, written on the day of his coronation, to which she had been refused admittance, claiming "that, after the publick insult her Majesty has received this morning, the King will grant her just Rights, to be crowned as next Monday." Dated, 19 July, 1821. Holograph. Signed "CAROLINE R." [Add. MS. 34,486, f. 93.]

110. HORATIO, VISCOUNT NELSON [b. 1758—d. 1805]. Sketch-plan of the Battle of Aboukir, generally called the Battle of the Nile, 1 Aug. 1798. In the corner is the following attestation:—"This was drawn by Lord Viscount Nelson's left hand, the only remaining one, in my presence, this Friday, Feb. 18th, 1803, at No. 23, Piccadilly, the house of Sir William Hamilton, late Ambassador at Naples, who was present. ALEXANDER STEPHENS." [Add. MS. 18,676.]

111. HORATIO, VISCOUNT NELSON. Letter written two days before the battle of Trafalgar to Lady Hamilton, telling her Father, may Heaven bless you prays your Nelson Son-in-law, Oct. 20th, in the morning we were close to the mouth of the Straight but the Wind had not come far enough to the Westward to allow the Combined Fleet to Weather the Shoals off Torpedagar but they were counted as far as forty sail of ships of War which I suppose to be 34 of the Line and six frigates, a group of them was seen off the Lighthouse off Ladiz this morn^g but it blows so very fresh I think probable that I rather believe they will go into the Harbour before night, May God

 Almighty give us success over these fellows that the enemy's combined fleets are coming out of port, and that he hopes to live to finish his letter. Dated, on board the Victory, 19 Oct. 1805. A postscript, written on the 20th Oct., the eve of the battle, is added, as follows: "Oct 20th. In the morning, we were close to the mouth of the streights, but the wind had not come far enough to the westward to allow the combined fleets to weather the shoals off Trafalgar [sic]; but they were counted as far as forty sail of ships of war, which I suppose to be 34 of the Line and six frigates. A group of them was seen off the Lighthouse of Cadiz this morning, but it blows so very fresh and thick weather that I rather believe they will go into the Harbour before night. May God Almighty give us success over these fellows and enable us to get a Peace." Holograph. Below is written in the hand of Lady Hamilton: "This letter was found open on his Desk and brought to Lady Hamilton by Captain Hardy. Oh, miserable wretched Emma! Oh, glorious and happy Nelson!" [Egerton MS. 1614, f. 125.]* Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 18.

John Jebb, D.D., Bishop of Limerick.* Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 19.

113. ARTHUR WELLESLEY, DUKE OF WELLINGTON. Letter to Lord Hill (his former second in command in the Peninsula), offering him the succession to himself in the chief command of the army: "You will have heard that in consequence of my being employed in the Government [as First Lord of the Treasury] I have been under the painful necessity of resigning my office of Commander in Chief In consequence of my resignation I have been under the necessity of considering of an arrangement to fill the office which I have held; and I have naturally turned towards you. There is no doubt that your appointment will be highly satisfactory to the country as well as the army; but it has occurred to some of the Government that, considering the place in which you stand on the list, it is better in relation to the senior officers of the army, some of whom have high pretensions, that you should be Senior General upon the Staff performing the duties of Commander in Chief than Commander in Chief." Dated, London, 1 Feb. 1828. Holograph [with signature from another letter]. Lord Hill held the post of General Commanding in Chief from 1828 to 1842. [Add. MS. 35,060, f. 512.] Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 15.

114. HENRY JOHN TEMPLE, VISCOUNT PALMERSTON [b. 1784—d. 1865]. Letter, as Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to R. B.

* Beside this letter of Lord Nelson is a small box made from a splinter of the Victory, knocked off by a shot in the Battle of Trafalgar, and containing a portion of Nelson's hair. Presented, in 1865, by Capt. Wm. Gunton.

Hoppner, British representative at Lisbon, on the course to be followed in the case of an outbreak of hostilities at Lisbon on the landing of Dom Pedro. Dated, 18 June, 1832. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2343, f. 6.]

115. SIR ROBERT PEEL [b. 1788—d. 1850]. Letter to Sir Robert Inglis, on the impossibility of increasing a Civil List pension. Dated, Whitehall, 27 Feb. 1843. Holograph. [Add. MS. 32,441, f. 379.] Presented, in 1884, by Mrs. A. Bennett.
116. LORD JOHN RUSSELL, afterwards EARL RUSSELL [b. 1792—d. 1878]. Letter, written while Prime Minister, to Bishop Maltby of Durham, with reference to the Papal Bull creating Roman Catholic bishops in England, commonly known as “the Durham Letter”: “I agree with you in considering ‘the late aggression of the Pope upon our Protestantism’ as ‘insolent and insidious,’ and I therefore feel as indignant as you can do upon the subject There is a danger, however, which alarms me much more than any aggression of a foreign Sovereign. Clergymen of our own Church, who have subscribed the thirty-nine Articles and acknowledged in explicit terms the Queen’s Supremacy, have been the most forward in leading their flocks ‘step by step to the very verge of the precipice.’ The honour paid to Saints, the claim of infallibility for the Church, the superstitious use of the sign of the Cross, the muttering of the liturgy so as to disguise the language in which it is written—the recommendation of auricular confession, and the administration of penance and absolution—all these things are pointed out by clergymen of the Church of England as worthy of adoption But I rely with confidence on the people of England, and I will not bate a jot of heart or hope so long as the glorious principles and the immortal Martyrs of the Reformation shall be held in reverence by the great mass of a nation which looks with contempt on the mummeries of superstition, and with scorn at the laborious endeavours which are now making to confine the intellect and enslave the soul.” Dated, Downing Street, 4 Nov. 1850. Holograph. [Add. MS. 35,068, ff. 3–5.] Presented, in 1896, by Lieut. G. R. Maltby.
117. BENJAMIN DISRAELI, afterwards EARL OF BEACONSFIELD [b. 1805—d. 1881]. Letter to Macvey Napier, editor of the Edinburgh Review, offering to write an article on Zohrab the Hostage, an Oriental romance by J. P. Morier: “With a great reluctance to hurt the feelings of so gentlemanlike a fellow as Morier, I must say that I have a great desire to show the public the consequence of having a tenth-rate novelist [Lockhart] at the head of a great critical journal [the Quarterly Review, which had praised the book], for really a production in every respect more contemptible than Zohrab I have seldom met with. My acquaintance with Oriental life would not disqualify me from performing the operation.” Dated, St. James, 23 Feb. 1833. Holograph [with signature from another letter, in which the

We are going to send our "Borden" tomorrow, with

- proposed article is abandoned, on account of political engagements]. [Add. MS. 34,616, f. 45.]
118. WILLIAM EWART GLADSTONE [b. 1809—d. 1898]. Letter to A. Panizzi, Principal Librarian of the British Museum, with reference to literary work and foreign politics: "I am no Achilles, and have had no provocation, great or small; nor am I, nor can I well be, asked to render any help, when the help I should render would be in the wrong direction. My ideas of foreign policy are, I fear, nearly the contradictories of those now in vogue [under the Palmerston government]. I am for trusting mainly to the moral influence of England, for uttering no threats except such as I mean to execute, for declining to revile to-day the men whom I lauded yesterday . . . in short, for a long list of heresies which the Times daily anathematizes ex cathedra, and for which I am most thankful not to be burned by a slow fire." Dated, Hawarden, 29 Nov. 1856. Holograph.
119. CHARLES GEORGE GORDON, Governor-General of the Soudan [b. 1833—d. 1885]. The last page of his Diary at Khartoum, 14 Dec. 1884, written on the backs of telegraph forms: "We are going to send down 'Bordeen' to-morrow with this journal. If I was in command of the 200 men of Expeditionary Force, which are all that are necessary for moment, I should stop just below Halfyeh and attack Arabs at that place before I came on here to Kartoum. I should then communicate with North Fort and act according to circumstances. Now mark this, if Expeditionary Force, and I ask for no more than 200 men, does not come in 10 days, the town may fall, and I have done my best for the honor of our country. Good bye. C. G. GORDON." Holograph. [Add MS. 34,479, f. 108.] Bequeathed, in 1893, by Miss M. A. Gordon. Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 20.
120. QUEEN VICTORIA. Letter to Miss M. A. Gordon, thanking her for the gift of a Bible which had formerly belonged to her brother, General C. G. Gordon: "It is most kind and good of you to give me this precious Bible, and I only hope that you are not depriving yourself and family of such a treasure if you have no other. May I ask you during how many years your dear heroic brother had it with him?" Dated, Windsor Castle, 16 March, 1885. Holograph. Signed, "VICTORIA R.I." [Add. MS. 34,483, ff. 7 b, 8.] Bequeathed, in 1893, by Miss M. A. Gordon. Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 21.

CHARTERS.

The term Charter (Lat. Charta, papyrus, paper) includes not only royal grants of privileges and recognitions of rights, such as the "Magna Charta" of King John and the Charters of municipal and other corporations, but any formal document of the nature of a covenant or record, whether public or private. Examples of various kinds, chiefly English, are here shown, including two papal Bulls (so called from the "bulla" or leaden seal used by the Popes) and a Golden Bull of the Emperor Baldwin II. They have been selected not only for the interest of their contents, but in order to illustrate the progress and changes of the chancery and charter hands, as distinguished from the book hand (see p. 75), between the eighth and the sixteenth centuries.

The usual mode of attestation after the Norman Conquest was by means of a seal without a signature; "Magna Charta," for example, was not actually signed in writing by the King, but had his great seal appended. The seal was in fact the signum or legal signature; and written signatures only became common, and eventually necessary, when ability to write was more general. In Saxon times, before Edward the Confessor, seals were very rarely employed; the names (usually of the King and his Witan or Council) were written by the same hand as the body of the document, and a cross prefixed or added. Some of the Charters here have the seal still attached; and a special selection of royal and other seals, many of which are of great artistic beauty, is exhibited in Cases L. M. (p. 113.)

1. Grant by OFFA, King of the Mercians, to Ealdbeorht, his "minister" or thegn, and his sister Seleðryð [Abbess of Lyminge] of land of 14 ploughs in the province of the Cantuarii at Ioccham and Perham stede [Ickham, and Parmested in Kingston, co. Kent], with swine-pasturage in the Andred wood, etc. Witnesses: King Offa, Iænbeorht, Archbishop of Canterbury, Cyneðryð, the Queen, and others. Dated at the Synod of Celchyð [Chelsea], A.D. 785. Latin. [Stowe Ch. 5.]
2. Grant by EADRED, King of the English, to Ælfwynn, a nun, of six "mansæ," or in the Kentish tongue "syx sulunga," of land at Wic ham [Wickham Breau, co. Kent], for two pounds of the purest gold. Witnesses: King Eadred, Eadgifu his mother, Oda, Archbishop of Canterbury, Wulfstan, Archbishop of York, and others. Dated A.D. 948. Latin, with the boundaries of the land in English. [Stowe Ch. 26.]

3. Grant by CNUT, King of the English, to Ælfstan, Archbishop [of Canterbury], at the petition of Queen Ælfgyfu, of a grove in the forest of Andredesweald, known as Haeselerse [co. Kent]. Witnesses: King Cnut, Wulfstan, Archbishop [of York], Ælfgyfu, the Queen, and others. Dated A.D. 1018. Latin, with the boundaries in English. [Stowe Ch. 38.]
4. Notification by EDWARD THE CONFESSOR to Archbishop Eadsige (d. 1050) and others, of his confirmation of all grants made by Earl Leofric and Godgyva his wife [Godgyfu, or Godiva] to St. Mary's Abbey, Coventry. [1043-1050.] English. [Add. Ch. 28,657.]
5. Notification by WILLIAM I., the Conqueror, King of the English, to Peter, Bishop of Chester [Lichfield and Coventry], Will. FitzOsbern, Earl [of Hereford], Hugh, Earl of Chester, and others, "Francis et Anglis," of his confirmation to Abbot Leofwin and St. Mary's Abbey, Coventry, of the grants of Earl Leofric as confirmed by King Edward (cf. no. 4). Witnesses: Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, Gosfrid, Bishop of Coutances, Robert, Count of Mortain, and others. [About 1070.] Latin. With seal. [Add. Ch. 11,205.]
6. Notification by WILLIAM II. to Osmund [de Sééz], Bishop of Salisbury, and all his barons and lieges, French and English, in Wiltshire, of his grant to the Church of St. Martin de Bello [Battle Abbey, co. Sussex], by order of his father, of the manor of Bromham [co. Wilts]. Witnesses: Eudo the Dapifer, Roger Bigot, and others. Dated at Winchester, [1087-1099]. Latin. [Cotton MS. Aug. ii. 53.]
7. Charter of Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury ("Dorobernensis ecclesie"), restoring to the monks of the same [sc. of Christ Church, Canterbury] the moiety of the altar of Christ, which he had after the death of Lanfranc his predecessor, who had restored the other moiety; and at the same time restoring the manor of Stistede [Stisted, co. Essex], which was known to belong to them. Witnesses: William, Archdeacon of Christ Church, Haimo the Sheriff, and others. [About 1095.] Latin. With seal. [Campb. Ch. vii. 5.] This charter and no. 9 are apparently not originals, though genuine seals are attached.
8. Notification by HENRY I. to Robert, Bishop of Lincoln, Simon, Earl [of Northampton], and Gilbert the Sheriff, and to the men "francigeni et angligeni" of co. Huntingdon, of an agreement between Aldwin, Abbot of Ramsey, and William the King's "Dispensator," whereby the latter is to hold the land of Elintuna [Ellington, co. Hunts] of the abbey till his death, the whole lordship then to revert to the abbey, to provide food for the monks. Witnesses: Randulf the Chancellor, Will. de Curci, Roger de Oli, and others. Dated, "apud nemus Wardbergam" [co. Hunts, about 1106-1114.] Latin. [Add. Ch. 33,250.]
9. Confirmation by HENRY I. to Archbishop William and the monks of Christ Church, Canterbury, of all the lands and privileges which they had in the time of King Edward and of William his father. [1123?] Latin. Followed by an English version, beg. "H. purh godesgeuu ængelandes kyning grete ealle mine bissceopes and ealle mine eorles and ealle mine scirgereuan and ealle mine ðegenas frencisce and ænglisce," etc. With seal, sewed up in a cover of green damask. [Campb. Ch. xxxi. 6.]

10. Grant by MATILDA, Empress [of the Romans], daughter of King Henry I. and Queen of the English, to St. Mary's Abbey, Reading, co. Berks, for her soul's health, and for the soul of King Henry her father and for the preservation of Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, and the lord Henry her son [Henry II.], etc., of the land of Windesor [Windsor, co. Berks.], and Cateshell [Catshill in Godalming, co. Surrey], which belonged to Geoffrey Purcell, and which he gave to the Monastery when he became a monk there. Witnesses: Henry [of Blois], Bishop of Winchester [brother of King Stephen], Alexander, Bp. of Lincoln, Nigel, Bp. of Ely, Bernard, Bp. of St. David's, Rodbert [de Bethune], Bp. of Hereford, Robert, Earl of Gloucester [natural son of Henry I.], Reginald [de Dunstanvill], Earl [of Cornwall, natural son of Henry I.], Rodbert his brother, Brien Fitz-Count, Milo [de Gloucester] the Constable, John the Marshal. Dated at Reading, [May, 1141?] Latin. [Add. Ch. 19,576.]
11. Notification by King STEPHEN of his grant, for the health of his soul and those of Matilda his queen, of Eustace his son, and of his other children, and for the soul of King Henry I., his uncle, to St. Mary's Abbey, Reading, of his manor of Bleberia [Blewberry, co. Berks.], with free customs, etc. Witnesses: M[atilda] the Queen, "my wife," H[enry of Blois], Bishop of Winchester, "my brother," Count E[ustace], "my son," and others. Dated at London, [about 1144]. Latin. With seal. [Add. Ch. 19,581.]
12. Confirmation by Gilbert [de Clare], Earl [of Pembroke], to St. Mary's Priory, Southwark, of the land of Perenduna [Parndon, co. Essex], which John the Steward and Nich. de Epinges granted to it, with William fil. Eadmundi, whose land it was, free of all service except scutage; and when one Knight [sc. one Knight's fee] gives 20 sh., that land shall give 2 sh., and when one Knight gives one mark, it shall give 16d., etc. Witnesses: Richard his son, Isabel the Countess, Hervicus his brother, and others. [1138-48.] Latin. [Cotton MS. Nero C. iii. f. 228.]
13. Charter whereby William, Earl of Warenne, confirms to the monks of St. Pancras [sc. Lewes Priory] all the lands, etc., which they hold of his fee, undertaking to acquit them of Danegeld and all other services due to the King, and moreover grants to them tithe of corn, hay, lambs, fleeces and cheeses, and the tenth penny of all his rents in England. This charter, he goes on to say, he granted and confirmed at the dedication of the church of St. Pancras, and he gave the church seisin of the tenth penny of his rents by hair cut with a knife from his own head and his brother's by Henry, Bishop of Winchester, before the altar ("quos abscidit cum cultello de capitibus nostris ante altare Hen. ep. Winton."). Witnesses: Theobald, Archb. of Canterbury, Henry, Bp. of Winchester, Robert, Bp. of Bath, and Ascelin, Bp. of Rochester, who dedicated the church, William [de Albini], Earl of Chichester, and others. [1142-1147.] Latin. [Cotton Ch. xi. 56.]

14. Grant by William fil. Audoeni to St. Denis Priory, near Hamton [Southampton], by the hand of Henry, Bishop of Winchester, of his land of Norham [Northam], with confirmation by the oblation of a knife ("per hunc cultellum.") Witnesses: Antelm the Prior, Walter his canon, Henry, Chancellor of the Bp. of Winchester, Osbert, Constable of Hamton, and others. Dated 1151. Latin. [Harley Ch. 50 A. 8.]

15. Treaty of peace between Ranulph [de Gernons], Earl of Chester, and Robert [de Beaumont], Earl of Leicester, providing for the surrender of the castle of Mount Sorrel, co. Leic., to the Earl of Leicester, the demolition of the castle of Ravensstone, co. Leic., etc.; made in presence of "the second" Robert [de Chesney], Bishop of Lincoln, and adherents of the two parties. [1147-1151.] Latin. [Cotton MS. Nero C. iii. f. 178.]

16. Grant by HENRY II. to the cathedral church of Winchester of the manors of Meonis [East Meon, co. Southt.] and Weregraua [Wargrave, co. Berks], with their churches, chapels, etc.; together with an addition of eight days to Winchester Fair, so that it may now last 16 days instead of eight as in the time of King Henry his grandfather. Witnesses: Theobald, Archb. of Canterbury, Hugh, Archb. of Rouen, and others. Dated at London, [Dec. 1154?] Latin. [Add. Ch. 28,658.]

17. Grant by HENRY II. to William and Nicholas, sons of Roger, son-in-law of Albert, of the charge of his galley ("ministerium meum de esnecca mea"), with the livery ("liberatio") belonging thereto, and all the lands of their father. Witnesses: Theobald, Archb. of Canterbury, Henry, Bp. of Winchester, T[homas Becket], Chancellor, and others. Dated at Oxford, [Jan. 1155?]. The word "esnecca" preserves the memory of the "Snekkar," or Serpents, as the Northmen called their long war-galleys. Latin. [Campb. Ch. xxix. 9.]

18. Confirmation by William, Count of Boulogne and Warenne, for the health of his soul and that of Isabella his wife [daughter and heir of William, 3rd Earl of Surrey and Warenne], and for the souls of King Stephen his father, Queen Matilda his mother, and Count Eustace his brother, of a grant from King Stephen to the Church of Saltereia [Sawtrey Abbey, co. Hunts.] of lands in Gamalingeia [Gamlingay, co. Cambs.]. Witnesses: Reinald de Warenne, Seher de Quinci, and others. Dated at Acre [Castle Acre, co. Norf., about 1155]. Latin. Grant from Robert [Trianel], Prior, and the Priory of St. Andrew at Northampton to Christian, Abbot, and the Abbey of Aunay in the diocese of Bayeux in Normandy, of two parts of the tithage of Aissebi [Ashby-Mears, co. Northampton], the Abbey in return to pay yearly six measures of winnowed corn into the Priory grange at Ashby. Witnessed by six priests, three from either House. Dated 1176. Latin. [Harley Ch. 44 A. 1.]
23. Fine at Oxford "in Curia Regis" before Rich. Giffard, Roger fil. Reinfrid and John de Caerdif, the King's Justices, on the feast of SS. Peter and Paul [sc. 29 June, 1176] next after the King took the allegiance of the barons of Scotland at York, whereby Ingrea and her three daughters quit to the canons of Oseney their claim to certain land in Oxford for 20 sh. Latin. This is the earliest known original record of the legal process known as a Fine or Final Concord. [Cotton Ch. xi. 73.]
24. Agreement whereby the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem surrender to Richard [Toclive], Bishop of Winchester, the charge and administration of the Hospital of St. Cross without the walls of Winchester, the Bishop raising the number of poor there entertained from 113 to 213 (of whom 200 were to be fed and 13 fed and clothed), assigning to the Knights Hospitallers the churches of Morduna [Mordon, co. Surrey] and Haninctona [Hannington, co. Southampton], and releasing them from the yearly payment to the monks of St. Swithin of 10 marks and two candles of 10 lbs. of wax. Dated at Dover, 10 Apr. 1185, in presence of Henry II., Eraclius, Patriarch of Jerusalem, and others. Latin. With autograph signatures of Bishop Toclive and Roger de Molins, Master of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem. Appended are the leaden "bulla" of R.

de Molins and the seals of the Bishop and of Garnerius de Neapoli, Prior of the Hospitallers in England. [Harley Ch. 43 I. 38.]

25. License by RICHARD I. to Reginald [Fitz-Jocelin], Bishop of Bath, and his successors for their hounds to hunt through the whole of Somerset, to take all beasts except hart and hind, buck and doe, and to pursue all that shall escape from their parks, with a penalty of 10 pounds against any who shall disturb them in so doing. Witnesses: Baldwin, Archb. of Canterbury, and others. Dated by the hand of W[illiam de Longchamp], Bishop-elect of Ely, Chancellor, at Canterbury, 26 Nov. 1st year [1189]. Latin. [Harley Ch. 83 C. 10.]
26. Confirmation by RICHARD I. to Alured de St. Martin, his steward, of a grant made to him for life by Henry, Count of Eu, on the death of Alice his [Henry's] mother [who married A. de St. Martin as her 2nd husband], of the dower-lands of the said Alice in Eleham and Bensinton [Elham and Bilsington, co. Kent]. Witnesses: H[ugh de Puisac], Bp. of Durham, and others. Dated, "per manum Will. de Longo Campo, Cancellarii nostri, Elyensis electi," at Canterbury, 30 Nov. 1st year [1189]. Latin. With seal. [Egerton Ch. 372.]

4. JEREMY TAYLOR, Bishop of Down and Connor [b. 1613—d. 1667]. Letter to Christopher Hatton, Lord Hatton: will send over in the spring the tracts D[uctor] D[ubitantium], etc.; the king has forgiven the Irish clergy their first fruits and twentieths, and sends over a lieutenant who will excel the Earl of Strafford in his kindness to the church. Dated, Dublin, 23 Nov. 1661. Holograph. [Add. MS. 29,584, f. 6.]
5. SIR CHRISTOPHER WREN [b. 1632—d. 1723]. Report on the design for the Monument of the Fire of London, recommending a brass statue, 15 feet high, for the top of the pillar, as "the noblest finishing that can be found answerable to soe goodly a worke in all mens judgments," though he considers "a ball of copper, 9 foot diameter, cast in severall peeces, with the flames and gilt . . . will be most acceptable of anything inferior to a Statue, by reason of the good appearance at distance, and because one may goe up into it, and upon occasion use it for fireworkes." Dated, 28 July, 1675. Holograph. [Add. MS. 18,898, f. 2.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 19.
6. JOHN DRYDEN [b. 1631—d. 1700]. Letter to [Laurence Hyde, Earl of Rochester, First Lord of the Treasury]: "I know not whether my Lord Sunderland has interceded with your Lordship for half a yeare of my salary. But I have two other advocates, my extreame wants, even almost to arresting, and my ill health. . . . If I durst, Iwou'd plead a little merit and some hazards of my life . . . but I onely thinke I merite not to sterve. . . . Be pleasd to looke on me with an eye of compassion; some small employment wou'd render my condition easy. The king is not unsatisfyed of me, the Duke has often promised me his assistance; and your Lordship is the conduit through which their favours passe. Either in the Customes or the Appeales of the Excise, or some other way; meanes cannot be wanting, if you please to have the will. 'Tis enough for one age to have neglected M^r Cowley and sterv'd M^r Buttler." [1682.] Holograph. [Add. MS. 17,017, f. 49.] Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 22.
7. JOHN LOCKE [b. 1632—d. 1704]. Letter to Dr. [afterwards Sir Hans] Sloane, with a proposal for the reformation of the Calendar, and referring to the performances of a strong man in London and to a new edition of his Essay on the Human Understanding: "The storys I have heard of the performances of the strong man now in London would be beyond beleif were there not soe many witnesses of it. I think they deserve to be communicated to the present age and recorded to posterity. And therefor I think you cannot omit to give him a place in your transactions, his country, age, stature, bignesse, make, weight, and then the several proofs he has given of his strength, which may be a subject of speculation and enquiry to the philosophical world. I took the liberty to send you just before I left the town the last edition of my Essay. I doe not intend you shall have it gratis. There are two new Chapters in it, one of the association of Ideas, and another of Enthusiasme; these two I expect you should read and give me your opinion frankly upon." Dated, Oates, 2 Dec. 1699. Holograph. [Sloane MS. 4052, f. 5 b.] Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 21.

8. SIR ISAAC NEWTON [b. 1642—d. 1727]. Letter to William Briggs, M.D., commending his "New Theory of Vision," but dissenting from certain positions in it: "I have perused your very ingenious Theory of Vision, in which (to be free with you, as a friend should be) there seems to be some things more solid and satisfactory, others more disputable, but yet plausibly suggested and well deserving the consideration of the ingenions," etc. Dated, Trinity College, Cambridge, 20 June, 1682. Holograph. [Add. MS. 4237, f. 32.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 19.

9. JONATHAN SWIFT, Dean of St. Patrick's, Dublin [b. 1667—d. 1745]. Letter to Mrs. Howard [afterwards Countess of Suffolk], complaining of the Queen [Caroline, queen of George II.] having neglected her promise to give him a medal: "I must now tell you, Madam, that I will receive no medal from Her Majesty, nor any thing less than her picture at half length, drawn by Jervas, and if he takes it from another original, the Queen shall sit at least twice, for him to touch it up. I desire you will let Her Majesty know this in plain words, although I have heard that I am under her displeasure. But this is a usual thing with Princes as well as Ministers, upon every false representation, and so I took occasion to tell the Queen upon the quarrel Mr. Walpole had with our friend Gay. . . . Mr. Gay deserved better treatment amongst you, upon all accounts, and particularly for his excellent unregarded fables dedicated to Prince William, which I hope His Royal Highness will often read for his instruction. I wish Her Majesty would a little remember what I largely sayd to her about Ireland, when before a witness she gave me leave and commanded to tell here what she spoke to me upon that subject, and ordered me that if I lived to see her in her present station to send her our grievances, promising to read my letter and do all good offices in her power for this miserable and most loyall Kingdom, now at the brink of ruin, and never so near as now." Dated, Dublin, 21 Nov. 1730. Holograph [with signature from another letter]. [Add. MS. 22,625, f. 20.] Presented, in 1858, by the executors of the Right Hon. J. W. Croker.

10. ALEXANDER POPE [b. 1688—d. 1744]. Letter to Lord Halifax, First Lord of the Treasury, submitting to him a portion of his translation of Homer, [prior to its publication in June, 1715], and thanking him for past and promised favours: "While you are doing justice to all the world, I beg you will not forget Homer, if you can spare an hour to attend his cause. I leave him with you in that hope, and return home full of acknowledgments for the Favours your Lordship has done me, and for those you are pleas'd to intend me. . . . Your Lordship may either cause me to live agreeably in the Towne, or contentedly in the Country; which is really all the Difference I sett between an Easy Fortune and a small one." Dated, 3 Dec. 1714. Holograph. In subsequently publishing this letter Pope omitted some of the expressions of gratitude, his expectations from Halifax not having been fulfilled. [Add. MS. 7121, f. 43.] Bequeathed, in 1829, by N. Hart. Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 20.

11. SIR RICHARD STEELE [b. 1671—d. 1729]. Letter to Henry Pelham, asking whether the Duke of Newcastle will recall the order of silence imposed upon Drury Lane Theatre; "but if My Lord insists to keep me out of my right, I must plainly tell you, that is, His Grace by you, that the right of petitioning the King in Council, the Parliament sitting, or the Judges in Westminster Hall, shall be utterly taken from me before I will suffer my very good Lord to send my children a starving." Dated, 27 May, 1720. Holograph. [Add. MS. 32,685, f. 31.] Presented, in 1886, by the Earl of Chichester. Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 20.
12. JOSEPH ADDISON [b. 1672—d. 1719]. Letter to J. Robethon, Secretary to George I., on the King's accession: "You will find a whole nation in the Highest Joy and thoroughly sensible of the great Blessings which they promise themselves from His Majestys accession to the Throne. I take the liberty to send you enclosed a poeme written on this occasion by one of our most Eminent hands [? Ambrose Philips], which is indeed a Masterpiece in its kind and tho very short has touched upon all the topics which are most popular among us. I have likewise transmitted to you a Copy of the preamble to the prince of Wales's Patent, which was a very gratefull task imposed on me by the Lords Justices." Dated, St. James's, 4 Sept. 1714. Holograph. [Stowe MS. 227, f. 419.] Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 23.
13. SAMUEL RICHARDSON, the Novelist [b. 1689—d. 1761]. Letter to [Cox Macro, D.D.], in defence of "the compromise between Sir Charles Grandison and Clementina in the article of religion." Dated, Salisbury Court, Fleet Street, 22 March, 1754. Holograph. [Add. MS. 32,557, f. 176.]
14. PHILIP DORMER STANHOPE, EARL OF CHESTERFIELD [b. 1694—d. 1773]. Letter, in French, to his son, on the duty of politeness to inferiors: "On ne fait pas des complimens a des gens audessous de soy, et on ne leur parle pas de l'honneur qu'ils vous font; mais en même tems il faut les traiter avec bonté et avec douceur. . . . Il faut donc agir avec douceur et bonté envers tous ceux qui sont audessous de vous et ne pas leur parler d'un ton brusque ni leur dire des duretés, comme si ils estoient d'une differente espece." Dated, Isleworth. Holograph; without signature. [Add. MS. 21,508, f. 41.]
15. WILLIAM HOGARTH [b. 1697—d. 1764]. Notes on his intentions in designing the pictures "Beer Street," "Gin Lane," and "The

- Four Stages of Cruelty" [executed in 1751]: "Bear St. and Gin Lane were done when the dreadfull consequences of gin drinking was at its height. In Gin Lane every circumstance of its horrid effects are brought to view. . . . Bear Street its companion was given as a contrast, were (sic) that invigorating liquor is recommend[ed] in orders (sic) [to] drive the other out of vogue. . . . The Four Stages of Cruelty were done in hopes of preventing in some degree that cruel treatment of poor Animals which makes the streets of London more disagreeable to the human mind than any thing whatever." Holograph. [Add. MS. 27,991, f. 49 b.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 21.
16. JOHN WESLEY [b. 1703—d. 1791]. Letter to Samuel [Bradburn], concerning the progress of evangelical work, and expressing his strong opinion that the Methodists ought not to leave the Church of England: "Bro. Jackson should advise bro. Ridel, not to please the Devil by preaching himself to death. I still think, when the Methodists leave the Church of England, God will leave them. Every year more and more of the Clergy are convinced of the truth, and grow well affected toward us. It would be contrary to all common Sense, as well as to good conscience, to make a separation now." Dated, Birmingham, 25 March, 1783. Holograph. [Add. MS. 27,457, f. 6.] Presented, in 1866, by Prof. George Stephens. Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 26.
17. OLIVER GOLDSMITH [b. 1728—d. 1774]. Agreement (never carried out) to write for James Dodsley, the publisher, a "Chronological History of the Lives of eminent persons of Great Britain and Ireland," at the rate of 3 guineas a sheet. Dated, 31 March, 1763. In Goldsmith's handwriting, and signed by both parties. [Add. MS. 19,022, f. 8.] Presented, in 1852, by Samuel Rogers, Esq. Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 23.
18. SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, P.R.A. [b. 1723—d. 1792]. Letter to the Duke of Newcastle, making an appointment to come and see some pictures put in their frames. Dated, Leicester Fields, 26 Aug. 1765. Holograph. [Add. MS. 32,969, f. 195.] Presented, in 1886, by the Earl of Chichester.
19. SAMUEL JOHNSON [b. 1709—d. 1784]. Letter to Warren Hastings, Governor of Bengal, soliciting his support for a translation of Ariosto by John Hoole: "Amidst the importance and multiplicity of affairs in which your great Office engages you I take the liberty of recalling your attention for a moment to literature, and will not prolong the interruption by an apology which your character makes needless. . . . It is a new thing for a Clerk of the India House to translate Poets. It is new for a Governor of Bengal to patronise Learning. That he may find his ingenuity rewarded, and that Learning may flourish under your protection is the wish of, Sir, your most humble Servant, SAM: JOHNSON." Dated, 29 Jan. 1781. Holograph. [Add. MS. 29,196, f. 4.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 24.

20. JAMES BOSWELL [b. 1740—d. 1795] and SAMUEL JOHNSON. Note to John Wilkes and his daughter, enclosing a card from Dr. Johnson in refusal of an invitation, and regretting that "so agreeable a meeting must be deferred till next year." Dated, South Audley Street, 25 May, [1783]. Holograph. [Add. MS. 30,877, f. 97.]
21. THOMAS CHATTERTON [b. 1752—d. 1770]. Letter to William Barrett, in reply to remonstrances against his expressed intention of committing suicide: "In regard to my Motives for the supposed rashness, I shall observe that I keep no worse Company than myself. . . It is my Pride, my damn'd, native, unconquerable Pride, that plunges me into Distraction. . . I must either live a Slave, a Servant; to have no Will of my own, no Sentiments of my own which I may freely declare as such;—or Die. Perplexing Alternative! but it distracts me to think of it." Signed "T. C." [1769.] Holograph. [Add. MS. 5766 B. f. 91.] Bequeathed, in 1800, by R. G. Clobery, M.D. Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 25.
22. DAVID HUME [b. 1711—d. 1776]. Letter to Richard Davenport, with reference to a proposal to obtain a pension from the government for Jean Jacques Rousseau: "I see that this whole Affair is a Complication of Wickedness and Madness; and you may believe I repent heartily that I ever had any Connexions with so pernicious and dangerous a Man. He has evidently been all along courting, from Ostentation, an Opportunity of refusing a Pension from the King, and at the same time of picking a Quarrel with me, in order to cancel at once all his past Obligations to me." Dated, 8 July, 1766. Holograph. [Add. MS. 29,626, f. 19.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 25.
23. EDWARD GIBBON [b. 1737—d. 1794]. Letter to his aunt Hester, on his departure for Lausanne: "Your good wishes and advice will not, I trust, be thrown away on a barren soil; and whatever you may have been told of my opinions, I can assure you with truth, that I consider Religion as the best guide of youth and the best support of old age: that I firmly believe there is less real happiness in the business and pleasures of the World, than in the life, which you have chosen, of devotion and retirement." Dated, Sheffield Place, 30 June, 1788. Holograph. [Add. MS. 34,486, f. 31 b.] Presented, in 1893, by Miss Sarah Law. Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 23.
24. DAVID GARRICK [b. 1716—d. 1779]. Letter to Edward Gibbon, repeating laudatory remarks of Lord Camden on the first volume of his History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, which had just appeared: "Lord Camden call'd upon me this morning and before Cumberland declar'd that he had never read a more admirable performance than Mr. Gibbon's History . . . such depth, such perspicuity, such language, force, variety, and what not?" Dated, Adelphi, 8 March, 1776. Holograph. [Add. MS. 34,886, f. 59 b.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 26.

25. JOHN PHILIP KEMBLE [b. 1757—d. 1823]. Letter to Samuel Ireland, desiring him to send the manuscript of the play of "Vortigern" [alleged to be by Shakespeare, but in fact forged by W. H. Ireland]. Dated, 27 Dec. 1795. Holograph. [Add. MS. 30,348, f. 62.]
26. SARAH SIDONS [b. 1755—d. 1831]. Letter to Samuel Ireland, regretting her inability through illness to act in "Vortigern." [29 March, 1796.] Holograph. [Add. MS. 30,348, f. 93.]
27. EDMUND KEAN [b. 1787—d. 1833]. Letter to R. Philips, apologising for an insult offered to him under his roof. Dated, 5 June, [1829]. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2159, f. 89.]
28. JOHN FLAXMAN, R.A. [b. 1754—d. 1826]. Letter to William Hayley on a design for a monument for Capt. Quantock in Chichester Cathedral, and on differences between W. Hayley and his wife. Dated, 14 Feb. 1813. Holograph. [Add. MS. 30,805, f. 42.]
29. SIR DAVID WILKIE, R.A. [b. 1785—d. 1841]. Letter to Perry Nursey, reporting the progress of some of his pictures, mentioning the election of Constable as A.R.A., and stating that the copies for the English market of the new novel "Ivan-Hoe," by the "great unknown," which "is said to be a very fine thing," are reported to have been lost at sea. Dated, Kensington, 28 Dec. 1819. Holograph. [Add. MS. 29,991, f. 22.]
30. JOSEPH MALLORD WILLIAM TURNER, R.A. [b. 1775—d. 1851]. Letter to Dawson Turner, of Yarmouth, thanking him for a present of bloaters; Mr. Phillips is recovering; is sorry to see by the paper that Sir A. W. Callcott, R.A., is dead, and that a robbery has been committed on the bank of Samuel Rogers. Dated, 26 Nov. 1844. Holograph. [Add. MS. 29,960 B.]
31. WILLIAM COWPER [b. 1731—d. 1800]. Letter to the Rev. William Unwin, commenting on Dr. Johnson's Lives of the Poets: "With one exception, and that a swingeing one, I think he has acquitted himself with his usual good sense and sufficiency. His treatment of Milton is unmercifull to the last Degree. A Pensioner is not likely to spare a Republican, and the Doctor, in order, I suppose, to convince his Royal Patron of the sincerity of his Monarchical Principles, has belabor'd that great Poet's Character with the most Industrious Cruelty. . . . I am convinced by the way that he has no ear for Poetical Numbers, or that it was stopp'd by Prejudice against the Harmony of Milton's. . . . Oh! I could thresh his old Jacket till I made his Pension jingle in his Pocket." Dated, 31 Oct. 1779. Holograph. [Add. MS. 24,154, f. 18.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 22.
32. ROBERT BURNS [b. 1759—d. 1796]. Song, "Here's a health to them that's awa'," written in support of the Whigs, about the end of 1792; with references to "Charlie, the chief of the clan" [i.e., Charles James Fox], and "Tammie, the Norland laddie, who lives at the lug o' the law" [i.e., Thomas Erskine,

- afterwards Lord Erskine]. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 1656, f. 27.] Facsimile in Ser. ii., no. 24.
33. SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE [b. 1772—d. 1834]. Letter to Basil Montagu, concerning the doctrines of Edward Irving, etc. [1 Feb. 1826.] Holograph. [Add. MS. 21,508, f. 55.]
34. WILLIAM WORDSWORTH [b. 1770—d. 1850]. Letter on receiving the news of the death of Coleridge, addressed to H. N. Coleridge, the poet's nephew and son-in-law: "I cannot give way to the expression of my feelings upon this mournful occasion; I have not strength of mind to do so. The last year has thinned off so many of my friends, young and old, . . . that it would be no kindness to you were I to yield to the solemn and sad thoughts and remembrances which press upon me. It is nearly 40 years since I first became acquainted with him whom we have just lost; and though . . . I have seen little of him for the last 20 years, his mind has been habitually present with me." Dated, 29 July, [1834]. Holograph. [Add. MS. 34,225, f. 193.] Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 25.
35. CHARLES LAMB [b. 1775—d. 1834]. Letter to John Clare, thanking him for a present of his poems and criticising his use of provincial phrases; with a recipe for cooking frogs, "the nicest little rabbitry things you ever tasted." Dated, India House, 31 Aug. 1822. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2246, f. 99.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 27.
36. GEORGE GORDON, LORD BYRON [b. 1788—d. 1824]. Letter to J. Hanson, his solicitor, with reference to his pecuniary difficulties: "It is in the power of God, the Devil, and Man, to make me poor and miserable, but neither the second nor third shall make me sell Newstead, and by the aid of the first I will persevere in this resolution." Dated, Athens, 11 Nov. 1810. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2611, f. 214.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 25.
37. PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY [b. 1792—d. 1822]. Letter to Miss Curran, at Rome, concerning designs for a monument [to his infant son William, who died on 7 June preceding], and mentioning that he has nearly finished his "Cenci" and wishes "to get a good engraving made of the picture in the Colonna Palace." Dated, Livorno, 5 Aug. 1819. Holograph. [Add. MS. 22,130, f. 94.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 26.
38. JOHN KEATS [b. 1795—d. 1821]. Letter to his sister Fanny [afterwards Señora Llanos], at the beginning of his last illness: "'Tis not yet Consumption, I believe, but it would be were I to remain in this climate all the winter; so I am thinking of either voyageing or travelling to Italy. Yesterday I received an invitation from Mr. Shelley, a Gentleman residing at Pisa, to spend the winter with him. . . . I am glad you like the Poems" [Hyperion, Lamia, etc., then just published]. [14 Aug. 1820.] Holograph. [Add. MS. 34,019, f. 81.] Presented, in 1891, by Señorita Rosa Llanos-Keats. Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 26.

39. ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON [b. 1809—d. 1892]. Letter to Mr. W. C. Bennett, with a sketch of the pile of letters which awaited him, "penny-post maddened," on his return from abroad, including "MS. poems," "printed proof-sheets of poems," requests for subscriptions, etc., topped with "letters for autographs," "anonymous insolent letters," and "letters asking explanation of particular passages." [22 Oct. 1864.] Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2805, f. 1.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 28.
40. ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING [b. 1806—d. 1861]. Letter to H. F. Chorley, with reference to a poem by her ["A Tale of Villa Franca," published in Poems before Congress, 1860], recently printed in the Athenæum sending him an additional stanza which had been omitted in the preliminary publication, "because it seemed to me likely to annul any small chance of Athenæum-tolerance," and discussing the state of Italian politics since the battle of Solferino, and other matters: "Is it really true that 'Adam Bede' is the work of Miss Evans? The woman (as I have heard of her) and the author (as I read her) do not hold together." Dated, Siena, [Sept.—Oct. 1859]. Holograph. [Add. MS. 35,155 H.] Presented, in 1897, by R. Barrett Browning, Esq.
41. ROBERT BROWNING [b. 1812—d. 1889]. Letter to William G. Kingsland, thanking him for his sympathy with his writings: "I can have little doubt but that my writing has been, in the main, too hard for many I should have been pleased to communicate with; but I never designedly tried to puzzle people, as some of my critics have supposed. On the other hand, I never pretended to offer such literature as should be a substitute for a cigar or a game of dominos to an idle man." Dated, London, 27 Nov. 1868. [Add. MS. 33,610 C.] Presented, in 1890, by P. Jenner Weir, Esq. Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 30.
42. SIR EDWARD LYTTON BULWER-LYTTON, afterwards LORD LYTTON [b. 1803—d. 1873]. Letter to Macvey Napier, with reference to an article for the Edinburgh Review and to supposed neglect of his novels, and depreciatory allusions, in the Review. "The singleness with which, as a novelist, I have contended against all prejudice and all hypocrisy has of course gained me many enemies . . . and all envy and all scorn are vented more successfully on works like mine than those of a graver nature." Dated, 8 Sept. 1830. Holograph. [Add. MS. 34,614, f. 387.]
43. CHARLES DICKENS [b. 1812—d. 1870]. Letter written the day before his death to Charles Kent, appointing to meet him on the morrow: "To-morrow is a very bad day for me to make a call . . . but I hope I may be ready for you at 3 o'clock. If I can't be—why then I shan't be. You must really get rid of those opal enjoyments. They are too overpowering. 'These violent delights have violent ends.' I think it was a father of your church who made the wise remark to a young gentleman who got up early (or stayed out late) at Verona," Dated, Gad's

Hill Place, 8 June, 1870. Holograph. [Add. MS. 31,022, f. 1.] Presented, in 1879, by Charles Kent, Esq. Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 27.

44. WILLIAM MAKEPEACE THACKERAY [b. 1811—d. 1863]. Letter to T. W. Gibbs, on some passages in Sterne's letters and his "Bramine's Journal" (see below, p. 70): "He wasn't dying, but lying, I'm afraid—God help him—a falser and wickedder man it's difficult to read of. . . . Of course any man is welcome to believe as he likes for me except a parson: and I cant help looking upon Swift and Sterne as a couple of traitors and renegades . . . with a scornful pity for them in spite of all their genius and greatness." Dated, 12 Sept. [1851]. Holograph. [Add. MS. 34,527, f. 75.] Bequeathed, in 1894, by T. W. Gibbs, Esq. Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 28.

45. THOMAS CARLYLE [b. 1795—d. 1881]. Letter to Macvey Napier, asking leave to review [Ebenezer Elliot's] Corn Law Rhymes for the Edinburgh Review: "His Rhymes have more of sincerity and genuine natural fire than anything that has come in my way of late years. . . . I would also willingly do the unknown man a kindness, or rather a piece of justice; for he is, what so few are, a man and no clothes-horse." He alludes also to his failure to find a publisher for his Sartor Resartus: "I have given up the notion of hawking my little Manuscript Book about any farther: for a long time it has lain quiet in its drawer, waiting for a better day. The Bookselling trade seems on the edge of dissolution; the force of Puffing can go no farther, yet Bankruptcy clamours at every door: sad fate! to serve the Devil, and get no wages even from him!" Dated, 6 Feb. 1832. Holograph. [Add. MS. 34,615, f. 262.] Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 29.

46. HENRY, LORD BROUGHAM AND VAUX [b. 1778—d. 1868]. Letter to Macvey Napier, on Macaulay's share in the Edinburgh Review: "As to Macaulay, I only know that he left his party which had twice given him seats in Parliament for nothing. . . and jumped at promotion and gain in India . . . But what think you of his never having called on me since his return? Yet I made him a Commissioner of Bankrupts in 1827 to the exclusion of my own brother. . . . As he is the second or third greatest bore in society I have ever known, and I have little time to be bored, I dont at all lament it, but I certainly know that he is by others despised for it." Dated, 6 July, 1838. Holograph. [Add. MS. 34,619, f. 199.]

47. THOMAS BABINGTON MACAULAY, afterwards LORD MACAULAY [b. 1800—d. 1859]. Letter to Macvey Napier, on Brougham's share in the Edinburgh Review: "As to Brougham's feelings towards myself, I know and have known for a long time that he hates me. If during the last ten years I have gained any reputation either in politics or in letters, if I have had any success in life, it has been without his help or countenance, and often in spite of his utmost exertions to keep me down.

I will not, unless I am compelled, make any public attack on him. But . . . I neither love him nor fear him." Dated, 20 July, 1838. Holograph. [Add. MS. 34,619, f. 233.]

(FOREIGN.)

1. DESIDERIUS ERASMUS [b. 1467—d. 1536]. Letter, in Latin, to Nicholas Everard, President of Holland, on Luther's marriage, etc.: "Solent Comici tumultus fere in matrimonium exire, atque hinc subita rerum omnium tranquillitas . . . Similem exitum habitura videtur Lutherana Tragoedia. Duxit uxorem, monachus monacham . . . Luterus nunc mitior esse incipit, nec perinde sevit calamo." Dated, Basel, 24 Dec. 1525. Holograph; with signature "ERASMUS Rot[erodamus] vere tuus, ex tempore manu propria." [Egerton MS. 1863, f. 2.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 30.

6. TIZIANO VECELLI [b. 1477—d. 1576]. Letter, in Italian, to the Marquis [afterwards Duke] of Mantua, asking him to expedite a grant which had been promised to him: "Spero per lo avvenire con quella poca virtu che mha dato Dio soddisfare in qualche parte al singulare obbligo chio tengo cum loptima cortesia del unico

- Marchese de Mantoa." Dated, Venice, 17 Jan. 1530. The date, address, etc., autograph; with signature "TICIAN PITORE." [Egerton MS. 2015, f. 3.]
7. LUDOVICO ARIOSTO [b. 1474—d. 1533]. Letter, in Italian, to the Duke of Mantua, accompanying a copy of the second edition of his "Orlando Furioso," amended and enlarged, and recommending the bearer to the Duke's favour. Dated, Ferrara, 8 Oct. 1532. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2015, f. 7.]
 8. GALILEO GALILEI [b. 1564—d. 1642]. Letter, in Italian, to Michelangelo Buonarroti the younger, thanking him for his letter, hoping to be with him before St. John's day, and referring to his improvement in the construction of spectacles. Dated, Padua, 4 Dec. 1609. Holograph. [Add. MS. 23,139, f. 39.]
 9. PETER PAUL RUBENS [b. 1577—d. 1640]. Letter, in Italian, to [—Dupuy?] on the defeat of the English at La Rochelle, thanking him for letters of J. L. Guez, Sieur de Balzac, criticising the latter's "Censor," etc. Dated, Antwerp, 30 Dec. 1627. Holograph; with the signature "PIETRO PAUOLO RUBENS." [Add. MS. 18,741, f. 101.]
 10. ANTHONY VAN DYCK [b. 1599—d. 1641]. Letter, in Dutch, to Francis Junius the younger, in praise of his work "De Pictura Veterum," and requesting him to supply a Latin motto for an engraved portrait of Sir Kenelm Digby. Dated, 14 Aug. 1636. Holograph. [Harley MS. 4935, f. 45.]
 11. PAUL REMBRANDT VAN RYN [b. 1608—d. 1669]. Letter, in Dutch, to [Constantine Huygens] Heer van Zuylichem, Secretary to the Prince of Orange, asking for payment of a sum due to him. Not dated. Holograph. [Add. MS. 23,744, f. 3.]
 12. MICHEL DE MONTAIGNE [b. 1533—d. 1592]. Letter, written while Mayor of Bordeaux, during the civil wars in France, [to the Maréchal de Matignon, Lieutenant-Governor of Guyenne], giving him all the information and reports he can gather as to the movements of various persons of political importance in the neighbourhood, and assuring him of his activity in the public service: "Je vous dis ce que j'aprans et mesle les nouvelles des bruits de ville que je ne treuve vraisemblables avec des verites . . . nous n'espargnerons cependant ny nostre souin ny s'il est besouin nostre vie pour conserver toutes choses en lobeissance du roy." Dated, Bordeaux, 22 May, 1585. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 23, f. 241.]
 13. JEAN BAPTISTE POQUELIN MOLIERE [b. 1622—d. 1673]. Notarial Certificate, in French, signed by him and Jacques Martin, relative to the disposition of the goods of Françoise Rousseau, deceased. Dated, 25 Jan. 1664. [Add. MS. 24,419, f. 2.]
 14. PIERRE CORNEILLE [b. 1606—d. 1684]. Letter, in French, to C. Huygens van Zuylichem, Secretary to the Prince of Orange, accompanying a gift of two volumes of his poems: "Ce sont les peches de ma jeunesse et les coups d'essay d'une Muse de Province, qui se laissoit conduire aux lumieres purement

- Naturelles, et n'avoit pas encore fait reflexion qu'il y avoit un Art de la Tragedie, et qu'Aristote en avoit laissé des preceptes. Vous n'y trouveres rien de supportable qu'une Médée qui veritablement a pris quelque chose d'asses bon a celle de Senèque," from which he proceeds to quote some lines. Dated, Rouen, 6 March, 1649. Holograph. [Add. MS. 21,514, ff. 20, 21.]
15. JEAN RACINE [b. 1639—d. 1699]. Letter, in French, to Nicolas Boileau Despreaux, the poet, on business matters, with news of the war [with England], the King's health, etc.: "Quelque horreur que vous ayez pour les meschans vers, je vous exhorte a lire Judith [a tragedy by the Abbé Boyer], et sur tout la preface dont je vous prie de me mander vostre sentiment. Jamais je n'ay rien veu si mesprisé que tout cela l'est en ce pays cy, et toutes vos predictions sont accomplies." Dated, Compiègne, 4 May, 1695. Holograph. [Add. MS. 21,514, f. 45.]
16. FRANÇOIS MARIE AROUET DE VOLTAIRE [b. 1694—d. 1778]. Letter, in English, to George Keate, F.R.S., expressing friendship and passing remarks on the literary position of England and France: "Had I not fix'd the seat of my retreat in the free corner of Geneva, I would certainly live in the free kingdom of England, for, tho I do not like the monstrous irregularities of Shakespear, tho I admire but some lively and masterly strokes in his performances, yet I am confident no body in the world looks with a greater veneration on your good philosophers, on the croud of your good authors, and I am these thirty years the disciple of your way of thinking. Your nation is at once a people of warriours and of philosophers. You are now at the pitch of glory in regard to publick affairs. But I know not wether you have preserv'd the reputation your island enjoy'd in point of litterature when Adisson, Congreve, Pope, Swift, were alive." Dated, Aux Délices, 16 Jan. 1760. Holograph. [Add. MS. 30,991, f. 13.] Bequeathed, in 1879, by John Henderson, Esq. Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 30.
17. JEAN JACQUES ROUSSEAU [b. 1712—d. 1778]. Letter, in French, to —, giving reasons for his refusal to write further in defence of the Protestants, and referring to what he had already written: "Quand un homme revient d'un long combat hors d'haleine et couvert de blessures, est-il tems de l'exhorter à prendre les armes tandis qu'on se tient soi-même en repos? . . . Mes cheveux gris m'avertissent que je ne suis plus qu'un vétéran, mes maux et mes malheurs me prescrivent le repos, et je ne sors point de la lice sans y avoir payé de ma personne." Dated, Motiers, 15 July, 1764. Holograph. [Add. MS. 24,024, f. 72.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 30.
18. VICTOR HUGO [b. 1802—d. 1885]. Letter, in French, to Charles Griffin, publisher, declining to correct the proof of the notice of his life in the Dictionary of Contemporary Biography: "Quelques petits faits inexacts sont moins graves à mes yeux que l'inexactitude des appréciations. Or, je comprends que sur ce point toute

- liberté doit être laissée à l'auteur de la biographie, dont je reconnais du reste avec empressement la parfaite politesse et la parfaite bonne foi." Dated, Hautville House [Jersey], 1 March, 1860. Holograph. [Add. MS. 28,510, f. 269.]
19. GOTTFRIED WILHELM LEIBNITZ [b. 1646—d. 1716]. Letter, in Latin, to Sir Hans Sloane, Secretary to the Royal Society, complaining of a statement made by Dr. Keill in the Transactions of the Royal Society to the effect that Leibnitz had derived his method of differential calculus from Sir Isaac Newton's method of fluxions and had published it, with a mere change of name, as his own discovery; protesting his complete independence of Newton ("vir excellentissimus"), and asking for a public withdrawal of the calumny. Dated, Berlin, 4 March, 1711. Holograph. The controversy as to priority and independence in this great mathematical discovery lasted long after the death of both Leibnitz and Newton. [Sloane MS. 4042, f. 263.]
20. IMMANUEL KANT [b. 1724—d. 1804]. Letter, in German, to D. Biester, royal librarian at Berlin, apologising for delay in sending contributions to the Berliner Monatsschrift: "Bedenken Sie indessen, werthester Freund! 66 Jahre alt, immer durch Unpäslichkeit gestöhrt, in Planen, die ich nur noch zur Hälfte ausgeführt habe und durch allerley schriftliche oder auch öffentliche Aufforderungen von meinem Wege abgelenkt, wie schwer wird es mir alles, was ich mir als meine Pflicht denke, zu erfüllen, ohne hier oder da eine zu verabsäumen." Dated, Königsberg, 29 Dec. 1789. Holograph. [Add. MS. 28,167, f. 76.]
21. JOHANN WOLFGANG VON GOETHE [b. 1749—d. 1832]. Letter, in German, to —, giving reasons for not entering at length upon a discussion of "die Windischmannische Recension," and returning his correspondent's manuscript. Dated, Weimar, 4 Aug. 1811. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2407, f. 122.]
22. JOHANN CHRISTOPH FRIEDRICH VON SCHILLER [b. 1759—d. 1805]. Letter, in German, to [Karl Theodor Körner] on domestic matters, with remarks upon C. F. Zelte's satisfactory setting of his ballad "Der Taucher" to music, upon F. Schlegel's tragedy "Alarcos" and Goethe's support of it, and upon W. Schlegel's tragedy "Ion." Dated, Weimar, 5 July, 1802. Holograph. [Add. MS. 29,804, f. 3.]
23. HEINRICH HEINE [b. 1799—d. 1856]. Letter, in French, to —, returning a volume of Goethe with adverse comments, and adding "Depuis 10 jours je suis ici, jouissant d'une parfaite solitude, car je suis entourré de la mer, de bois, et d'Anglais, qui sont aussi muet que le bois—je ne veux pas dire aussi hölzern." Dated, Boulogne, 15 July, 1834. Holograph. [Add. MS. 33,964, f. 433.] Bequeathed, in 1891, by A. G. Kurtz, Esq.
24. GEORGE FREDERICK HANDEL [b. 1685—d. 1759]. Letter to [the Keeper of the Ordnance Office], requesting him to deliver the artillery kettle-drums lent to him for use in his oratorios. Dated, 24 Feb. 1750. Holograph. [Add. MS. 24,182, f. 15.]

25. GEORGE FREDERICK HANDEL. Portion of the original manuscript of the anthem "As pants the hart." Holograph. [Add. MS. 30,308, f. 130.]
26. JOSEPH HAYDN [b. 1732—d. 1809]. Letter, in German, to William Forster, musical instrument maker, complaining of Artaria, the music publisher of Vienna, and mentioning the enhanced value of his compositions and that he had a contract for six pieces for upwards of 100 guineas. Dated, Esterhazy, 28 Feb. 1788. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2380, f. 9.]
27. JOHANN CHRYSOSTOM WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART [b. 1756—d. 1791]. Score of the 130th Psalm ('De Profundis'), in Latin, for four voices with organ accompaniment. [1770?] Holograph. [Add. MS. 31,748, f. 1.]
28. LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN [b. 1770—d. 1827]. Sketch of music of "Adelaide," from a note-book containing rough drafts of several of his compositions. [1795?] Holograph. [Add. MS. 29,801, f. 44.]
29. LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN. Letter, in German, to Baron Ignaz von Gleichenstein, with reference to a change in the dedication of one of his works. [1808?] Holograph. [Add. MS. 29,804, f. 10.]
30. FELIX MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY [b. 1809—d. 1847]. Setting of the 13th Psalm (in the version of C. B. Broadley, to whom it is dedicated) as a mezzo-soprano or alto solo, with organ accompaniment. Dated, Leipzig, 14 Dec. 1840. Holograph. [Add. MS. 31,801, f. 3.]
31. WILHELM RICHARD WAGNER [b. 1813—d. 1883]. Sketch of the People's Chorus, melody and bass only, from the end of the 2nd act of "Rienzi." [1839?] Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2746, f. 3.]
32. WILHELM RICHARD WAGNER. Authorisation, in German, to Theodor Uhlig, royal Kammermusik at Dresden, to deliver to the director of the Stadttheater at Wurzburg, on payment of 50 thalers, a corrected copy of the music and words of "Tannhäuser." Dated, Zürich, 24 Aug. 1852. Holograph. [Add. MS. 29,999, f. 30.]

AUTOGRAPH LITERARY WORKS,

ETC.

Besides literary works proper, including five at the end by famous foreign authors (Nos. 44-48), a few other MSS. of personal interest, such as volumes with royal and other inscriptions, autograph note-books, etc., are here exhibited.

[In Cases IX. and X. on either side of the entrance to the King's Library.]

1. HENRY VII. AND VIII. Book of Hours, etc., in Latin; written late in the 15th century, and illuminated in Flemish style. The volume seems to have belonged to a lady in the court of the Tudor Kings, and contains autograph inscriptions by Henry VII. ("Madame I pray you Remembre me, your lovyng maistre, HENRY R.") and Elizabeth his Queen ("Madam I pray you forget not me to pray to God that I may have part of your prayers, ELYSABETH y^e quene"), § Henry VIII. ("HENRY R.") and Queen Katherine of Aragon ("I thinke the prayrs of a frend be most acceptable unto God, and because I take you for one of myn assured I pray you to remembre me in yours, KATHERINA the quene," the last two words having been subsequently obliterated). On f. 192 b is a prayer translated from Latin by Princess [afterwards Queen] Mary in her 11th year; and below, an autograph inscription by the Princess ("I have red that no body lyvethe as he shulde doo but he that foloweth vertu, and I rekenyng you to be on of them I pray you to remembre me in your devocyons, MARYE the princess," the last two words having been subsequently obliterated). [Add. MS. 17,012.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 2.
2. HENRY VIII. Metrical version of the Penitential and other Psalms, in English [by John Croke, Clerk in Chancery]; written early in the 16th century. With a portrait of Henry VIII. Bound in gold, worked in open leaf-tracery, with remains of black enamel. At the top of the covers are rings to attach the volume to the girdle. Traditionally said to have been given by Queen Anne Boleyn, when on the scaffold, to one of her maids of honour. [Stowe MS. 956.]

3. EDWARD VI. Treatise on the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ, in French, composed in 1549 by King Edward VI., and written with his own hand; with corrections by his tutor. [Add. MS. 29,432.]
4. EDWARD SEYMOUR, DUKE OF SOMERSET. A small volume containing the Calendar, and various tables for the moveable feasts, epacts, etc.; and having on the flyleaf some Scriptural verses written by the Duke of Somerset "frome the toware [the Tower] the day before my dethe, 1551." He was executed on 22 Jan. 155 $\frac{1}{2}$. The last sentence is "Be not wise in thyne owne conseyte, but fere the lord and fle frome evile." [Stowe MS. 1066.]
5. LADY JANE GREY. A small Manual of Prayers, written on vellum, with miniatures; believed to have been used by Lady Jane Grey on the scaffold, 12 Feb. 155 $\frac{3}{4}$. It contains on the margins some lines in the handwriting of Lady Jane, addressed to Sir John Gage, Lieutenant of the Tower, and to the Duke of Suffolk, her father: to the former, "[The] Precher sayethe there is a tyme to be borne and a tyme to dye and the daye of deathe is better then the daye of oure birthe. youres as the lorde knowethe trew frende, JANE DUDDLEY"; and to the latter, "The Lorde comforte your grace and that in his worde whearein all creatures onlye are to be comforted, and thoughe it hath pleased God to take awaye ii of youre children, yet thinke not, I moste humblye beseche your grace, that you have loste them, but truste that we by leasinge thys mortall life have wunne an immortal life, and I for my parte, as I have honoured youre grace in thys life, wyll praye for you in another life. youre gracys humble daughter, JANE DUDDLEY." [Harley MS. 2342.]
6. ELIZABETH, WHEN PRINCESS. Prayers or Meditations, composed originally in English by Queen Katherine Parr, and translated into Latin, French, and Italian, by Queen Elizabeth, when Princess. Entirely in her own hand, on vellum; with a dedication to her father, Henry VIII., dated, Hertford, 20 Dec. 1545. In silk binding, embroidered with silver. [Royal MS. 7 D. x.]
7. WILLIAM CECIL, LORD BURGHLEY [b. 1520—d. 1598]. Memorandum-book of public and private business, about 1592. The page exhibited contains a list of the ships of the Royal Navy, with their stations, tonnage, and crews. [Royal MS. App. 67.]
8. JAMES I. ΒΑΣΙΛΙΚΟΝ ΔΩΡΟΝ, or Book of the Institution of a Prince; written by King James for the instruction of his son, Prince Henry. Wholly in the King's hand; and in the original binding of crimson velvet, with the King's initials and the arms of Scotland, in gold. [Royal MS. 18 B. xv.]
9. CHARLES I., WHEN PRINCE. "FLORUM FLORES, sive Florum ex veterum Poetarum floribus excerptorum Flores": a selection of passages from the classical Latin Poets, entirely in the hand of Prince Charles, and presented by him to his father James I. as a new year's gift. [Royal MS. 12 D. viii.]

10. CARDINAL WOLSEY [b. 1471—d. 1530]. The Life of Cardinal Wolsey, by George Cavendish, his Gentleman Usher. The original MS. [Egerton MS. 2402.]
11. SIR FRANCIS BACON [b. 1561—d. 1626]. Memorandum-book of Sir F. Bacon, afterwards Lord Verulam and Viscount St. Albans, containing memoranda for public and private business, literary notes, etc., entered in July and August, 1608. [Add. MS. 27,278.]
12. BEN JONSON [b. 1574—d. 1637]. "The Masque of Queenes," represented at Whitehall, 2 Feb. 1609. In the autograph of the author, with a dedicatory address to Prince Henry. [Royal MS. 18 A. XIV.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 18.
13. SIR WALTER RALEGH [b. 1552?—d. 1618]. Journal of his second voyage to Guiana, from 19 Aug. 1617 to 13 Feb. 1618, in search of gold. From 30 Oct. to 11 Nov. he was disabled by fever, and the change of hand at f. 172, l. 11, shows where he resumed his Journal on his recovery. Holograph. The failure of this expedition, and the acts of hostility against Spain done in the course of it, led to his execution shortly after his return home [29 Oct. 1618]. [Cotton MS. Titus B. viii.] Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 6.
14. WILLIAM HARVEY [b. 1578—d. 1657]. Original notes for Lectures on Universal Anatomy, delivered on 16, 17 and 18 April, 1616, containing the first public statement of his discovery of the circulation of the blood. One of the pages shown (f. 80 b) contains the conclusion of his demonstration of this discovery: "unde d[emonstratum est] perpetuum sanguinis motum in circulo fieri pulsu cordis." [Sloane MS. 230.]
15. JOHN MILTON [b. 1608—d. 1674]. Album Amicorum of Christopher Arnold, Professor of History at Nuremberg, containing autographs collected in the years 1649–1672; including a sentence in Greek, signed by the poet Milton, "JOANNES MILTONIUS," and dated, London, 19 Nov. 1651. [Egerton MS. 1324.]
16. JOHN MILTON. The Holy Bible: Printed by Robert Barker, London, 1612. The copy which formerly belonged to John Milton, who has entered, in his own hand, on a blank page, memoranda of the births, etc., of himself and members of his family; others being added by a different hand under Milton's direction. [Add. MS. 32,310.] Facsimile in Ser. ii. no. 18.
17. PERCY BALLADS. The volume of English Ballads and Romances from which Bishop Percy selected the poems published in 1765 under the title of "Reliques of Ancient English Poetry"; written in the middle of the 17th century. [Add. MS. 27,879.]
18. LUCY HUTCHINSON [b. 1620—d. 167–]. Narrative of the Civil War in Nottinghamshire, 1642–5; afterwards used as the basis of part of her Memoirs of her husband, Colonel John Hutchinson, M.P., Governor of Nottingham [d. 1664]. [Add. MS. 25,901.]
19. SAMUEL BUTLER [b. 1612—d. 1680]. Draft of a passage in "Hudibras" (iii. 3, l. 621), from a volume of autograph literary

- remains in prose and verse, many of them unpublished. [Add. MS. 32,625, f. 139.]
20. JOHN LOCKE [b. 1632—d. 1704]. Original Diary and Note-book kept by John Locke during 1679, partly at Paris and partly in England. [Add. MS. 15,642.]
21. DANIEL DEFOE [b. 1661?—d. 1731]. The original MS. of "The Compleat English Gentleman"; written about 1729. [Add. MS. 32,555.]
22. ALEXANDER POPE [b. 1688—d. 1744]. A volume of the original draft of Pope's Translation of the Iliad and Odyssey, in his own hand and for the most part written upon the backs of letters addressed to himself. [Add. MS. 4808.] Presented, in 1766, by Mrs. Lucy Mallet.
23. LAURENCE STERNE [b. 1713—d. 1768]. The first part of the corrected draft of "A Sentimental Journey through France and Italy," by Laurence Sterne, M.A. [1767]; in the author's own hand. The page exhibited contains the mention of "Eliza" and her picture referred to in his Journal [see the next MS. exhibited, [no. 24]. [Egerton MS. 1610.] Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 24.
24. LAURENCE STERNE. "The Bramine's Journal," being Sterne's Journal addressed to Mrs. Eliza Draper after her departure for India. It extends from 13 April [1767] to 4 Aug., with a postscript on 1 Nov., and is entirely in the author's hand. It is full of expressions of extreme devotion, and was discontinued on the arrival of Mrs. Sterne. At the beginning is a note (evidently prefixed with a view to publication) stating that the names are fictitious and the whole translated from a French manuscript. The page exhibited contains the entry for 17 June: "I have brought your name Eliza! and Picture into my work" [The Sentimental Journey, see the page exhibited above, no. 23]—"where they will remain—when you and I are at rest for ever.—Some annotator or explainer of my works in this place will take occasion to speak of the Friendship which subsisted so long and faithfully betwixt Yorick and the Lady he speaks of." See also the letter of W. M. Thackeray exhibited in Case VII., no. 44, written after reading the MS. [Add. MS. 34,527.] Bequeathed, in 1894, by T. W. Gibbs, Esq.
25. DR. SAMUEL JOHNSON [b. 1709—d. 1784]. Original draft of Dr. Johnson's Tragedy of "Irene," acted at Drury Lane in 1749; in the author's own hand. [King's MS. 306.]
26. EDWARD GIBBON [b. 1737—d. 1794]. Autobiographical Memoirs, being the six sketches of parts of his life from which the "Memoirs of My Life and Writings" were selected and put together after his death by Lord Sheffield. The pages exhibited belong to the fifth of these sketches, and contain the well-known narrative of his first conception of the idea of writing his history: "It was at Rome, on the fifteenth of October, 1764, as I sat musing amidst the ruins of the Capitol, while the bare-footed fryars

- were singing Vespers in the temple of Jupiter, that I conceived the first thought of my history." Holograph. [Add. MS. 34,874.]
27. THOMAS CHATTERTON [b. 1752—d. 1770]. "Eclogues and other Poems, by Thomas Rowley, with a glossary and annotations by Thomas Chatterton": being a portion of the literary forgeries of Chatterton, in his own hand, written about 1767-8. [Add. MS. 24,890.]

Case X.

28. THOMAS GRAY [b. 1716—d. 1771]. "Elegy written in a Country Churchyard"; a fair copy, enclosed in a letter to Dr. Thomas Warton. Dated, Cambridge, 18 Dec. [1750]. The poem had already circulated privately to some extent, but was not published until Feb. 1751. Holograph. [Egerton MS. 2400, f. 45.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 22.
29. GILBERT WHITE [b. 1720—d. 1793]. Letters to T. Pennant, from 10 Aug. 1767 to 8 July, 1773, being the original form of most of the first part of the Natural History of Selborne. The pages exhibited contain his description of the sedge warbler, a reference to speculations as to the origin of species peculiar to America, and part of White's poem, "The Naturalist's Summer Evening Walk." [29 May, 1769.] Holograph. [Add. MS. 35,138.]
30. WILLIAM COWPER [b. 1731—d. 1800]. "The Entertaining and facetious History of John Gilpin, showing how he went farther than he intended and came home safe at last. To the tune of Chevy Chase." Copy in the poet's own hand, apparently sent by him to the Rev. W. Unwin. [1782.] [Add. MS. 24,155, f. 31.]
31. ROBERT BURNS [b. 1759—d. 1796]. The original MS. of the Autobiography of Robert Burns, contained in a letter to Dr. John Moore dated, Mauchline, 2 Aug. 1787; with a postscript dated, Edinburgh, 23 Sept. of the same year. [Egerton MS. 1660.]
32. GEORGE GORDON, LORD BYRON [b. 1788—d. 1824]. "Childe Harold's Pilgrimage: a Romaunt." The first and second cantos, as copied for the press for the first edition, London, 1812; with corrections and notes in the author's own hand. [Egerton MS. 2027.]
33. SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE [b. 1772—d. 1834]. Literary remains, in prose and verse. Holograph. The first page exhibited (f. 8 b) contains the conclusion of the "Hymn before Sunrise in the Vale of Chamouny," signed, and with the note "S. T. Coleridge intreats Mrs. Brabant to excuse the slovenly state into which this Copy has degenerated from Candles and Carelessness. . . . It is however a correct Copy, and the only correct Copy in existence." Facsimile in Ser. i. no. 24. The second page (f. 2) is from a school exercise, entitled "Dura Navis," written in his 15th year, with a note added in his 51st:

- "I well remember old Jemmy Bowyer, the plagose Orbilius of Christ's Hospital, but an admirable Educuer no less than Educator of the Intellect, bad me leave out as many epithets as would turn the whole into 8-syllable Lines,—and then ask myself if the Exercise would not be greatly improved. How often have I thought of this proposal since then—and how many thousand bloated and puffing lines have I read that by this process would have tripped over the tongue excellently." [Add. MS. 34,225.]
34. CHARLES LAMB [b. 1775—d. 1834]. Extracts from the Garrick Plays in the British Museum, contributed by Lamb to Hone's Table Book. [1826.] One of the two original note-books into which the selected passages were copied, in Lamb's own hand throughout. The page exhibited contains a scene from "Arden of Feversham," a play supposed by some critics to have been written, at least in part, by Shakespeare. [Add. MS. 9956.] Presented, in 1835, by Mr. E. Moxon.
35. ROBERT SOUTHEY [b. 1774—d. 1843]. "Joan of Arc": a poem, in ten books, by Robert Southey. The original MS., with notes and corrections for the first edition [published in 1796] by the author and S. T. Coleridge. [Add. MS. 28,096.]
36. SIR WALTER SCOTT [b. 1771—d. 1832]. Autograph manuscript of the novel of "Kenilworth," by Sir Walter Scott, corrected for the press; written between Sept. 1820 and Jan. 1821. [Egerton MS. 1661.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 27.
37. JOHN KEATS [b. 1795—d. 1821]. Note-book, containing autograph copies of "The Pot of Basil," an Ode ("Souls of Poets dead and gone"), and "The Eve of St. Mark," written 1818–19 and sent by the poet to his brother George in America; with transcripts, apparently by Mrs. George Keats, of "Saint Agnes' Eve" and several of the shorter poems, evidently from early autograph drafts. All the poems differ more or less from the printed copies. "The Eve of Saint Mark," here exhibited, is obviously the first draft of the poem, with corrections bringing it into the form in which it was subsequently published by Lord Houghton from a copy found among Keats' papers after his death. [Egerton MS. 2780.]
38. THOMAS BABINGTON MACAULAY, afterwards LORD MACAULAY [b. 1800—d. 1859]. Article on "Gladstone on Church and State," contributed to the Edinburgh Review in April, 1839: the original MS. as sent to press. It begins: "The author of this volume" [W. E. Gladstone, M.P., afterwards Prime Minister] "is a young man of unblemished character and of distinguished parliamentary talents, the rising hope of those stern and unbending Tories who deplore the necessity which compels them to follow, reluctantly and mutinously, a leader whose experience and eloquence are indispensable to them, but whose cautious temper and moderate opinions they abhor. It would not be at all strange if Mr. Gladstone were one of the most unpopular men in England But we believe that we do him no more than

O loyal to the royal in thyself,
 And loyal to thy land, as this to thee —
 Bear witness, that memorable hour, morn
 When pale from fever yet the goodly Prince,
 Who scarce had plucked his flickering life again
 From halting down the shadow of the grave,
 Past with thee thro' thy people & their love,
 And London rolled one ^{tid} voice of joy thro' all
 Her tumbled millions, & loud leagues of man
 And welcome: witness too, the silent cry,
 The prayer of many a people, creed & clime —
 Thundering lightnings striking under sea
 From sunset & sunrise of all thy realm,
 And that true north, whence we lately heard
 A strain to shame us 'Keep ye to yourselves,
~~For here~~ ^{For here} we sicken of your loyalty: depart!
 Your love is as a burden; get you gone?

ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON.

- justice when we say that his abilities and his demeanor have obtained for him the respect and good will of all parties." [Add. MS. 34,629, f. 1.] Facsimile in Ser. iii. no. 28.
39. WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR [b. 1775—d. 1864]. Autograph Poems, etc., consisting mainly of the shorter pieces published in his "Heroic Idyls" (1863), written, according to his custom, on small scraps of paper. 40. JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, afterwards Cardinal [b. 1801—d. 1890]. "The Dream of Gerontius": the actual copy sent to the printers of the Month magazine, in which it first appeared, with autograph additions and corrections. On the page exhibited the last three lines, together with the signature, are autograph. [1865.] [Add. MS. 33,984.]
41. ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON [b. 1809—d. 1892]. Epilogue to the "Idylls of the King," addressed to the Queen; first published in 1872. Holograph. [Add. MS. 35,203, f. 1.] Presented, in 1898, by Hallam, Lord Tennyson. Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 28.
42. CHARLOTTE BRONTË [b. 1816—d. 1855]. "The Spell, an Extravaganza. By Lord Charles Albert Florian Wellesley"; with other stories and fragments written in 1834–5, but never published. In a feigned hand; with signatures and dates in her natural hand. [Add. MS. 34,255.]
43. GEORGE ELIOT [pseudonym of MARIAN EVANS, b. 1819—d. 1880]. "Adam Bede": the original MS., with dedication at the beginning, "To my dear husband, George Henry Lewes, I give this MS. of a work which would never have been written but for the happiness which his love has conferred on my life. MARIAN LEWES, March 23, 1859." A note is appended, stating that the work was begun on the 22 Oct. 1857 and finished on 16 Nov. 1858. "A large portion of it was written twice, though often scarcely at all altered in the copying; but other parts only once." The page exhibited is from one of the passages specified as having been written only once. [Add. MS. 34,020.] Bequeathed by the authoress. Facsimile in Ser. iv. no. 27.

(FOREIGN.)

44. LIONARDO DA VINCI [b. 1452—d. 1519]. Book of observations and demonstrations, in Italian, on subjects chiefly of mixed mathematics, being unconnected notes entered at different times, beginning 22 March, 1508. Written in his own hand from right to left in reversed letters. [Arundel MS. 263.]
45. MICHELANGELO BUONARROTI [b. 1474—d. 1564]. Autograph draft of a poem [Madrigale lii., ed. Guasti], in Italian, differing from the five other forms in which it is known; on a sheet containing pencil drawings. [Add. MS. 21,907, f. 1.]

46. ALBERT DÜRER [b. 1471—d. 1528]. One of four volumes of sketches, with rough drafts of portions of the text in German, for various works on Art, especially on the Proportions of the Human Body, Fortification, and Architecture. The pages exhibited contain designs for roofs, with explanatory text, all in Dürer's hand. [Sloane MS. 5229.]
47. TORQUATO TASSO [b. 1544—d. 1595]. The autograph manuscript of his tragedy "Torismondo," with numerous corrections. From the library of Cardinal Cibo. [Add. MS. 23,778.]
48. LOPE FELIX DE VEGA CARPIO [b. 1562—d. 1635]. Comedies, in Spanish, in the author's own hand, 1624–1628. The volume is open at the end of the Third Act of "Sin secreto no ai Amor," showing the poet's signature, and the licence for the piece to be acted, dated, 13 Dec. 1626. [Egerton MS. 548.]

MANUSCRIPTS.

In Cases A—F, which occupy the middle of the room, is exhibited a series of MSS., which, apart from the interest of their contents, illustrate the progress of handwriting. Cases A and B contain Greek MSS., from the 3rd century before Christ to the 15th century, when hand-written books were superseded by the invention of printing. The material on which Greek books were written in classical times, and down to about the 4th century after Christ, was papyrus, a material resembling paper, made out of the stem of the papyrus plant, which grew in Egypt. This was made into large rolls, on which literary matter was written in columns, corresponding roughly in size to the pages in modern books. Specimens of papyrus MSS. are shown in Case A. For literary works the style of writing was properly that known as uncial, or capital letters seldom or not at all attached to one another [see Nos. 1, 3, 4, 5, 8, 9, 11, 35]; while for the ordinary purposes of every-day life a cursive or running hand was employed, as at the present day [see Nos. 12—34]. Occasionally a literary work was transcribed in a cursive, or non-literary, hand [see No. 7], but such copies were intended for private use, not for public circulation. About the 4th century vellum or parchment superseded papyrus as the material commonly used for literary purposes, and the modern book form, with pages, was adopted in place of the earlier roll form. Manuscripts on papyrus are occasionally found in book form; but these, belong only to the period of transition. For private purposes papyrus continued in use much later, till about the 8th century. Case B contains Greek MSS. on vellum and (from the 13th century onwards) on paper; the earlier MSS. (from the 4th to the 9th or 10th century) being written in uncials (larger and heavier than on papyrus, and wholly without ligatures), the later (from the 9th to the 15th century) in minuscule or cursive hands. In Cases C and D are arranged MSS., chiefly in Latin (Nos. 60—133), in which the development of the writing of Western Europe can be followed from about A.D. 600 to the end of the 15th century. The earliest specimens are written in uncial, or large, letters, which differ from ordinary capitals chiefly in the rounded forms of A, D, E, H, M (Α, Δ, Ε, Η, Μ). To these succeed various specimens of national handwritings in half-uncial, or mixed large and small, letters, or minuscules, as practised in England, Ireland, France, Italy, and Spain, until in the 9th Century the Caroline or Carolingian form of minuscule writing, which developed in the French schools established under the rule of Charlemagne, gradually superseded them, and became the common hand of Western Europe which survives to the present day; as may be seen in the specimens numbered 79 and onwards. Case E contains Anglo-Saxon and English MSS. (Nos. 134—159) from A.D. 1000 to the 15th century written in Saxon characters and the succeeding forms of English writing. In the octagonal Case F in the centre are Chronicles of England down to the 15th century.

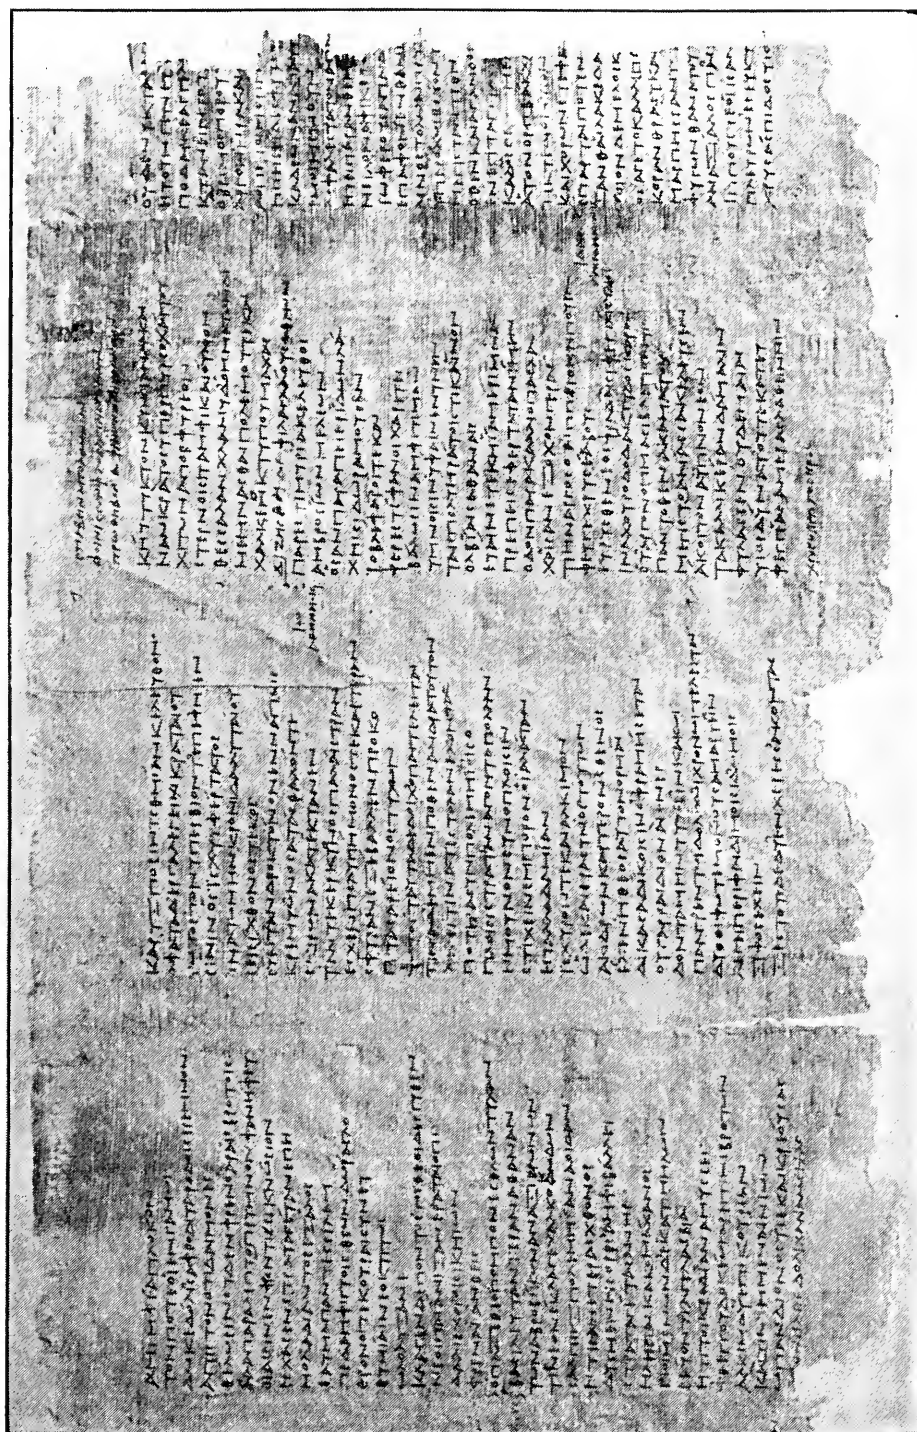

I.—GREEK MSS.

Case A.—Papyri.

1. PLATO: portions of the Phaedo. The oldest classical Greek manuscript in existence (except a few very small fragments), written in the 3rd century B.C., in a small uncial hand. Discovered in the cartonnage of a mummy-case, composed of fragments of papyrus covered with plaster. [Papyrus cccclviii.] Presented, in 1895, by H. Martyn Kennard, Esq.

2. HYPERIDES, Oration against Philippides. The only extant manuscript of the oration, but very imperfect, only the concluding portion of it being preserved. Brought from Egypt in 1890. Written in a delicate semi-uncial hand, probably in the 1st century B.C., with exceptionally narrow columns, leaning somewhat to the right. [Pap. cxxxiv.]
3. BACCHYLIDES, Triumphal Odes and Dithyrambs. The only extant manuscript of the poet, brought from Egypt in 1896. Written in a fine uncial hand, probably in the 1st century B.C. Twenty poems are preserved, whole or in part, of which six are contained in the portion here exhibited, which is the longest continuous part of the papyrus roll in its present mutilated condition. The subjects are "The Sons of Antenor," "Heracles," "Theseus and Minos," "Theseus at Athens," "Io," and "Idas." [Pap. dccxxxi.]
4. HOMER'S ILIAD: fragments of books xxiii. and xxiv. Found in Egypt. The MS. when complete was a roll of about 20 ft. in length, containing 43 or 44 columns. The critical marks of Aristarchus have been added in some cases, and a few scholia. The part exhibited contains Il. xxiv., ll. 164-243. Written in a fine, square uncial hand, probably in the 1st century B.C. [Pap. cxxviii.]
5. HOMER'S ODYSSEY, book iii., ll. 283-497. The earliest extant MS. of any portion of the poem. Found in Egypt. Carefully written in a graceful uncial hand, early in the 1st century; with scholia in a small cursive hand, added about the end of that century. [Pap. cclxx.]
6. HYPERIDES: fragments of a roll (about 28 feet long when complete) containing the orations against Demosthenes and in defence of Lycophron and of Euxenippus. The only extant MS. of these orations. Found in a tomb at Gournou in the district of Western Thebes in Egypt, in 1847. Written in graceful rounded uncials, probably towards the end of the 1st century. [Pap. cviii.]
7. ARISTOTLE ON THE CONSTITUTION OF ATHENS. The only extant MS. of the work, brought from Egypt in 1890. Written about A.D. 100 in four rolls, in four different hands, on the back of papyrus which had already been used [in A.D. 78-79] for the accompts of a farm-bailiff named Didymus, near Hermopolis. The portion exhibited is the latter part of the first roll, written in a small cursive (i.e. running) hand with abbreviations. [Pap. cxxxi. verso.]
8. THE MIMES OF HERODAS: part of an incomplete roll, about 15 ft. in length, containing seven poems, with small portions of at least two more. The only extant MS. of this author, brought from Egypt in 1890. The part exhibited contains the dramatic sketch (in choliambic verse) entitled "The Schoolmaster," BACCHYLIDES.

- describing the flogging of a scapegrace boy. Written in a small, clear uncial hand, in the 1st or 2nd century. [Pap. cxxxv.]
9. HOMER'S ILIAD: portions of books xiii. and xiv. Found in Egypt. The MS. when complete was a roll of about 16 ft. in length, containing 36 columns. The part exhibited contains ll. xiii., ll. 187-301. Written in a firm, well-formed uncial hand of medium size, in the 1st or 2nd century. [Pap. dcxxxii.]
10. PSALTER: fragment, containing Ps. xii. 7-xv. 4. One of the earliest MSS. of any portion of the Bible at present known to be in existence. Found in Egypt in 1892. Written stichometrically; and a second hand has marked off the syllables by a dot over the end of each, probably for the purpose of reading or singing in school. Written in a well-formed uncial hand. Late 3rd or early 4th century. [Pap. ccxxx.]
11. HESIOD: fragments of the Theogonia, including portions of ll. 210-238, 260-270. Written with very black ink, in a large and firm uncial hand. Probably 4th or 5th century, contemporary with the early MSS. on vellum, and so marking the transition from the one material to the other. [Pap. clix.]
12. WILL of Aphrodisius of Heraclea, a residence in Crocodilopolis [Arsinoë] in Egypt. Written in a fine semi-cursive hand. B.C. 226-5. Found (like no. 1) in the cartonnage of a mummy-case. [Pap. cccxciii.]
13. PETITION addressed to Ptolemy [Euergetes I.] by a soldier, complaining of an assault upon him by a person named Cephalon. Written in a very cursive hand. B.C. 222. [Pap. cvi.]
14. TAXING ACCOUNT, from the village of Ptolemaidis Hormus in the Fayum. Written in a clear semi-cursive hand. 3rd cent. B.C. [Pap. dlxxvii.]
15. LETTER from Ammonius, a Treasury clerk in the district of Oxyrhynchus, to Phaies, the Oeconomus, or principal revenue official of the district, reporting that he has been suddenly arrested and put in prison. 3rd cent. B.C. [Pap. dxxviii.]
16. PETITION from Ptolemy the Macedonian, a recluse in the Temple of Serapis at Memphis, to the strategus Dionysius, complaining of an assault made upon him by several of the Egyptian attendants in the temple, who disliked him because he was a Greek. Written in slightly cursive uncials. B.C. 161. [Pap. xliv.]
17. LOAN of 35 artabas of wheat from Apollonia, wife of Druton, to Apollonius and his wife Heraïs, to be repaid without interest after the next harvest. Written in a small, regular cursive hand. B.C. 132. [Pap. dxxiii.]
18. LOAN of six measures of wine from Petearsemtheus to Psemmenches, without interest. From the Pathyrite nome in Upper Egypt. Written in a rather thick cursive hand. B.C. 106-5. [Pap. dclviii.] Presented, in 1896, by E. R. Bevan, Esq.
19. ANNUAL RETURN, of the nature of a census-paper, addressed by Pnepheros, an agricultural labourer, to Apollonius, the village

- secretary; written in a small cursive hand, with abbreviations. 28 Jan., B.C. 19. [Pap. dclxvi.]
20. PETITION addressed to Gaius Tyrrhanus, Prefect of Egypt, by Satabous, an agricultural labourer, and his son, for redress of an injury done to them, and release from unjust imprisonment. Written very carefully, in a handsome uncial hand. About B.C. 10. [Pap. cccliv.]
21. PETITION addressed to Gaius Vitrasius Pollio, Prefect of Egypt, by Versenuphis for assistance to recover property left to him and his brothers by their father, which had been seized by their elder married sister. Written in a large, clear uncial hand. A.D. 40-41. [Pap. clxxvii.]
22. RECEIPT given by Chaeremon to three tenants of his land, for a portion of the produce of the land, paid to him as rent. Written in a strongly-marked semi-cursive hand. 23 Aug., A.D. 48. [Pap. cxxxix a.]
23. THREE CERTIFICATES granted to natives of the village of Socnopaei Nesus (in the Fayum), of having performed the statutory five days' labour on the embankments. Written in a very small cursive hand, with the signature of Dionysius, the official granting the certificate, in large, rather rough uncials. 2 Aug. A.D. 49. [Pap. clxv.]
24. RECORD of sale by Didymus, also named Diodorus, and Diodora his wife, to Miccalus, son of Ptolemy, of some olive-yards near the village of Karanis. Dated at Ptolemaïs Euergetis in the nome of Arsinoë [the Fayum], 3 June, A.D. 88. Written in a large, carefully-formed uncial hand, with cursive superscription. [Pap. cxli.]
25. RECEIPT given by Cephalas to Tapontos, natives of Karanis, for the sum of 160 drachmas, paid as an instalment of the purchase money of some land. Written in a small cursive hand, bearing some resemblance to that of the Aristotle [No. 7]. 2 March, A.D. 97. [Pap. cxliii.]
26. RECEIPT given by Dioscorus, a resident in the street of the Goose-pens in Heracleia, to Stotoëtis, a native of Socnopaei Nesus, for the sum of 148 drachmas, the price of an ass. Written by the scribe Alcimus, in a very cursive hand. 10 Aug. A.D. 142. [Pap. cccliii.]
27. RECEIPT given by Claudianus to Didymus and others for the repayment of a debt of 1124 drachmas. Written in a cramped cursive hand. 10 Sept., A.D. 166. [Pap. cccxxxii.]
28. ANNUAL RETURN by the priests of the god Socnopaeus [the crocodile-god] and the gods who share his temple, probably for the purpose of taxation. Imperfect; written in a large and clearly defined semi-cursive hand. 23 Aug. A.D. 221. [Pap. cccliii.]
29. RECEIPT given by Petechon to Aurelia Senosiris, natives of the village of Cusis in the Great Oasis, for the repayment of a loan of 1000 drachmas, with interest. Written in a small, rather thick, cursive hand. 7 Oct. A.D. 265. [Pap. dccix.]

30. LETTER from Demetrius, an official in charge of the revenue derived from the Government monopoly of natron (bitumen), to Abinnaeus, officer in command of a body of auxiliary troops in the camp of Dionysias (in the Fayum), requesting him to look out for smugglers importing natron into his district. Written in a good-sized semi-cursive hand. About A.D. 346. [Pap. ccxxxi.]
31. LETTER from Jovinus to Abinnaeus [see no. 30], begging him, in concert with the other officials concerned, to send him the ten artabas of vegetable-seed supplied to orphans; with friendly greetings to his wife and family. Written in a rather irregular cursive hand. About A.D. 346. [Pap. cccix.]
32. LETTER from Flavius Macarius, steward of the imperial estates in Egypt, to Abinnaeus [see no. 30], requiring him, on pain of being reported for disaffection to the imperial house, to furnish soldiers to assist in the collection of the imperial dues. Written in a large semi-cursive hand. About A.D. 350. [Pap. ccxxiv.]
33. LETTER from Victor, serving in the state galley of the governor of the Thebaid, to four other persons, complaining that they have compelled a certain Senuthes to undertake a public duty to which he is not liable, instead of serving in the galley, to which he is liable by hereditary custom, and threatening unpleasant consequences if they do not release him. Written in a large cursive hand. About A.D. 400. [Pap. dccxxii.]
34. CONTRACT for the lease of a farm from Phoebammon, tabularius of the town of Arsinoë, to John and Castous, agricultural labourers; the landlord to receive by way of rent two-thirds of the crops in general and five-sixths of the hay, but to be liable to perform the cutting of the hay and to provide the seed and animals for working the farm. Written in a clear, rather ornamental hand, of fair size. 8 June, A.D. 595. [Pap. cxiii (4).]
35. FESTAL LETTER from a Patriarch of Alexandria to his clergy, informing them of the date of Easter for the current year [25 April]; the information being accompanied by a theological disquisition and aspirations for the peace and unity of the Church. Imperfect, only the conclusion being preserved. Written in a large and handsome uncial hand of Coptic type. Probably A.D. 577. [Pap. dccxxix.]

[For a later Greek papyrus, of the 8th century, and for specimens of Coptic and Latin papyri, see p. 111].

Case B.—Wax, Vellum, and Paper MSS.

36. WAX-TABLET (such as the ancients used for note-books, letters, etc.), containing two lines of iambic verse, probably from Menander, written first by a schoolmaster in large capital letters and copied twice by a pupil. Probably 2nd cent. [Add. MS. 34,186.]

37. DEMOSTHENES: two leaves of the oration De Falsa Legatione. Written on vellum in double columns in a small uncial hand, resembling that found in some papyri. IV.—MS. CHRONICLES OF ENGLAND.

Case F.

A small typical selection of Chronicles and other MSS. intended to illustrate the manner in which the history of this country was recorded and handed down before the invention of printing, viz. :—

1. NENNIUS, Historia Britonum. The earliest history of Britain was written by Gildas, about the year 560, containing an account of the Roman conquest and occupation, the departure of the Romans (in 410), and the invasion and conquest of the island by the Saxons. Of this history there is no manuscript in the British Museum, except a badly burnt fragment of the 10th century. The next history to it in date is that of which a copy is here exhibited. It is attributed to Nennius on the authority of a prologue contained in one MS., which states that it was composed in the year 858; but there are some grounds for believing that it is really considerably older. In any case, nothing is known of the author's life. It contains the history of Britain in Latin from the Roman conquest to the year 687, but is so full of legendary matter that its authority can be but little depended on.

The manuscript here shown [Cotton MS. Vesp. D. xxi.] was written in the 12th century, and the passage exhibited describes the preaching of Christianity in Ireland by St. Patrick [§§ 53, 54]. The following is a translation of part of it :—

“ From the creation of the world to the baptism of the Irish there are 5330 years; in the fifth year of King Loygare [A.D. 425] did St. Patrick begin to preach the faith of Christ. Thus St. Patrick preached the Gospel of Christ to foreign nations for forty years: he showed apostolical powers, he gave sight to the blind, he healed lepers, he made the deaf to hear, he cast devils out of the bodies of those who were possessed, he raised nine men that were dead to life, he redeemed many from captivity, both men and women, at his own expense. He wrote 365 manuals, or more, and founded the same number of churches. He ordained 365 bishops, or more, men in whom was the Spirit of God. Of priests he ordained as many as 3000, and in the region of Conachta (Connaught) alone he converted 12,000 persons to the faith of Christ, and baptised them. He fasted forty days and forty nights on the top of Mount Eile (that is, Cruachan Eile); on which mountain, overhanging the sea, he graciously made three petitions for all the Irish who received the faith. The first petition, as the Scots say, is that to everyone should be granted repentance, even though it were in the last extremity of life; the second, that they should not be utterly consumed by barbarians for ever; the third, that no Irishman should be alive at the Day of Judgment, since they will be destroyed in honour of St. Patrick seven years before the Judgment. Moreover, on that hill he blessed the peoples of Ireland, and indeed he ascended thither that he might pray for them, and that he might see the fruit of his labour; and there came to him innumerable birds of many colours, that he might bless them, signifying that all the saints of Ireland, of either sex, will come to him on the Day of Judgment, as to their father and master, that they may follow him to judgment. After this he passed away in a good old age to that place where he now liveth in joy for ever and ever. Amen."

2. BEDE, Historia Ecclesiastica Gentis Anglorum. The "Venerable" Bede is the first great historian of England, and most of our knowledge of the history of our country down to his time is derived from his work. He was born in 673, lived all his life as a monk at Jarrow in Northumberland, and died, in the act of translating the Scriptures into English, in 735. His Ecclesiastical History of the English, written in Latin, deals primarily with the English Church; but, owing to the intimate connection of Church and State in those days, it is also to a very great extent a general history of the country. It begins with a summary (taken from Gildas and other authors) of events from the invasion of Cæsar in B.C. 55 to the preaching of Christianity by Augustine in 597. From 597 to 731 the history is given in full detail, being based upon contemporary records collected by Bede and his own personal knowledge. It is the chief authority for the history of the introduction of Christianity into England, both in the south by Augustine from Rome, and in the north by Aidan from Iona.

More than 130 manuscript copies of Bede are known. The copy here shown [Cotton MS. Tiber. A. xiv.] is one of the earliest, having been written at the end of the 8th century or early in the 9th, and consequently not long after the lifetime of Bede himself. It belonged to Sir R. Cotton, and was considerably damaged in the fire among his books at Ashburnham House in 1731. A still older copy is exhibited in Case C, no. 65.

The passage exhibited, of which a translation follows, describes the origin of the mission of Augustine by Pope Gregory to England (Bk. II., Ch. i.).

"Nor should we pass over in silence the story concerning the blessed Gregory which has been handed down to us by our forefathers, as to the reason which encouraged him to take such zealous care of the salvation of our people. They say that on a certain day, when some merchants had lately arrived and many wares were brought together into the market for sale and a crowd of purchasers had assembled, Gregory too came with the rest and saw there, among other objects, some youths exposed for sale; they were of fair complexion and handsome countenance, with beautiful hair. When he saw them he asked, as the story goes, from what region or land they had been brought; and he was told they were from the island of Britain, and that all the inhabitants were of like appearance. Again he asked whether the islanders were Christians, or were still shrouded in pagan error; and he was told that they were pagans. Then, sighing from the bottom of his heart, he said: 'Alas, the pity, that the author of darkness should possess men of such bright countenance, and that such beauty of outward appearance should bear a mind void of internal grace!' He asked therefore again, what was the name of the people, and it was answered that they were called Angles [English]. 'Good,' said he, 'for they have an angelic face, and such should be co-heirs of the Angels in heaven. What is the name of the province from which they have been brought?' He was told that they were of the province of Deira. 'Good,' said he, 'De-ira; they are snatched from wrath [de ira in Latin], and called to the mercy of Christ. How is the king of that province named?' It was answered that he was called Ælla; whereupon, playing upon the name, he said, 'Alleluia, the praise of God the Creator must be sung in those parts.' Then going to the bishop of the Roman and apostolical see (for he was not yet bishop himself) he asked him to send some ministers of the word into Britain to the people of the Angles, by whom they might be converted to Christ."

3. THE ANGLO-SAXON CHRONICLE is the earliest history of this country in English. The first part of it, from the invasion of Cæsar [B.C. 55] to the reign of Alfred [A.D. 871-901], is believed to have been compiled by order of King Alfred; and from that time it was carried on by successive chroniclers (whose names are not known) in various monasteries down to the year 1154, forming a sort of Annual Register of the most important events in each year. It is thus not only one of the most valuable authorities for the history of England, especially from the time of Alfred to the Norman Conquest, but also an unique record of the development of the language from its early Anglo-Saxon form until it approaches the character of English as we know it.

The copy here shown [Cotton MS. Tiber. B. iv.] was written towards the end of the 11th century; the Chronicle is brought down to the year 1016 in one hand, and continued in several others to 1079. It belonged to Sir R. Cotton, and suffered damage in the fire at Ashburnham House in 1731.

The passage exhibited [of which a translation into modern English from B. Thorpe's edition follows] contains a record of the war with the invading Danes in 871, including the great victory of Æthelred and Alfred at Ashdown, the site of which is commonly supposed to be marked by the well-known figure of a white horse cut in the chalk in the Vale of the White Horse, Berkshire.

"In this year [A.D. 871] the army [i.e. the Danes] came to Reading, in Wessex, and, three nights after, two jarls rode up, when the aldor-man Æthelwulf met them at Inglefield and there fought against them and gained the victory; and one of them was there slain, whose name was Sidroc. Four nights after this King Æthered and Ælfred his brother led a large force to Reading and fought against the army, and there was great slaughter made on each side; and the aldorman Æthelwulf was slain, and the Danes held possession of the battle-place. And four nights after, king Æthered and Ælfred his brother fought with all the army at Ashdown; and they were in two divisions; in one were Bagsecg and Hâlfðân, the heathen kings, and in the other were the jarls; and then king Æthered fought with the kings' division, and there was the king Bagsecg slain; and Ælfred his brother fought against the jarls' division, and there was the elder jarl Sidroc slain, and the younger jarl Sidroc, and Asbiörn jarl and Fræna jarl and Harald jarl, and both divisions put to flight, and many thousands slain; and they were fighting until night. And fourteen nights after, king Æthered and Ælfred his brother fought against the army at Basing, and there the Danes gained the victory. And two months after, king Æthered and Ælfred his brother fought against the army at Merton; and they were in two divisions, and they put both to flight, and far in the day were victorious; and there was great slaughter on each side, but the Danes held possession of the battle-place; and there were bishop Heahmund slain and many good men."

4. WACE, Roman de Rou. Wace was a Norman, born in Jersey, and lived from about 1100 to 1170. He wrote a poetical history of the Norman Conquest, in French, which contains by far the fullest description of the Battle of Hastings. Wace had known many men who had fought in the battle, and his account is full of minute details of the fighting.

The copy here exhibited [Royal MS. 4 C. xi.] was written in the 13th century. The passage selected is part of the account of the Battle of Hastings. The following is Sir A. Malet's translation of the lines which describe the palisade formed by the English, and the arrangement of the English forces.

"Short Axes, sharp Bills, were the arms of offence
By the English Foot borne, and they made them a Fence
Of Bucklers, and wattle work well interlac'd;
Thus forming a Breastwork, in front of them plac'd.
The Barrier so form'd was a close Hurdle like,
Which the Normans must force, ere a stroke they could strike.
Thus fenc'd with their Shields, and a stout Barricade,
They deem'd,—and with reason,—defence might be made.
And if to this purpose they firmly had held,
Other issue that day had most surely beheld:
For no Norman Warrior that Barrier did force,
But met with disaster, and fell a dead Corse;
Hewn down by the Axe edge, or smote by Gisarme,
Or slain by the Club, or by some other arm.
Short close-fitting Hauberks those Englishmen wore,
And Helmets that join'd to their Hauberks they bore.

* * * * *

The Kentish Men, claiming as matter of right
 To stand in the Van and strike first in the Fight,
 He caus'd to advance, and position to take,
 Where deeming the Normans their onset would make.
 They claim'd, when their Monarch to Battle should go,
 The right in that Battle to strike the first Blow.
 The Londoners' claim was His person to guard,
 That where'er He stood, they should keep watch and ward;
 They also to guard the King's Standard were bound,
 And where it was planted they took up their ground."

5. SIMEON OF DURHAM, Historia Dunelmensis Ecclesiæ. For several centuries after the Norman Conquest, the writing of history was carried on almost exclusively by monks. The greater monasteries trained a succession of writers, some of whom merely recorded in their chronicles such events as concerned the monasteries themselves, with occasional notices of outside occurrences of general interest; while others devoted themselves to the production of regular histories of the country from the earliest times down to their own day. One such flourishing school of historians is found in the north of England, carrying on the traditions of Bede. Simeon, a monk first of Jarrow and afterwards of Durham, was directed by his superiors, about the years 1104–1108, to write a History of the Church of Durham, which he brings from the establishment of Christianity in Northumbria by Aidan in 635 down to the year 1096. Like nearly all literary works down to the 15th century, it is written in Latin. It is principally occupied with religious matters, and is a valuable link in the history of the Church of England. He also wrote a general history, based largely upon Bede [see no. 2] and on Florence of Worcester, whose Chronicle comes down to 1116.

The copy here shown [Cotton MS. Faust. A. v.] was written in the 12th century, in or soon after the lifetime of Simeon himself, being copied from a manuscript at Durham, which may have been the author's own copy.

The passage exhibited, of which a translation follows, describes the wanderings of the monks of Lindisfarne with the body of St. Cuthbert during an invasion by the Danes [875–883], and the loss and recovery of a valuable copy of the Gospels, written in honour of St. Cuthbert. This identical MS. is now in the British Museum [Cotton MS. Nero D. iv.].

[The monks endeavoured to cross over to Ireland, carrying the saint's body with them; but a storm drove them back.] "In this storm, while the ship was lying over on her side, a copy of the Gospels, adorned with gold and precious stones, fell overboard and sank into the depths of the sea. Accordingly after a little while, when they had in some degree recovered their senses and reflected who and where they were, they bend their knees and prostrate themselves at full length before the feet of the sacred body, asking pardon for their foolish venture. Then they seize the rudder and turn the ship back to the shore and to their fellows, and immediately they arrive there without any difficulty, the wind blowing astern. . . . Amidst their lamentations in this distress at length the accustomed help of their pious patron came to their aid, whereby their minds were relieved from grief and their bodies from labour, seeing that the Lord is a refuge of the poor, a helper in times of trouble. For appearing in a vision to one of them, Hunred by name, he bade them seek, when the tide was low, for the manuscript which, as above related, had fallen from the ship into the midst of the waves; for perchance, beyond the utmost they could hope, they would, by the mercy of God, find it. For the loss of that book too had afflicted them with the most profound grief. . . . Accordingly they go to the sea and find that it had retired much further than it was accustomed; and after walking three miles or more they find the sacred manuscript of the Gospels itself, exhibiting all its outer splendour of jewels and gold and all the beauty of its pages and writing within, as though it had never been touched by water. . . . Further, the above-mentioned book is preserved to this day in this church [of Durham], which is honoured by the possession of the holy father's body, and, as we said before, no sign of damage by water is visible in it. And this is believed to be due to the merits of St. Cuthbert himself and of those who made the book, namely, bishop Eadfrid of holy memory, who wrote it with his own hand in honour of the blessed Cuthbert, and the venerable Ethelwold, his successor, who caused it to be adorned with gold and precious stones, and St. Bilfrid the anchorite, who, obeying with skilled hand the wishes of his superior, achieved an excellent work. For it was a splendid example of the goldsmith's art."

6. WILLIAM OF MALMESBURY, Gesta Regum Anglorum. This writer was born about 1095 and died about 1143. Nearly the whole of his life appears to have been spent in the monastery of Malmesbury, of which he ultimately declined the abbacy, preferring to retain the librarianship. He was an active historian, writing The Acts of the Kings of England, in which he summarises the early history from 449 to 731, where Bede had already covered the ground, and then continues it in greater detail down to 1125; The Acts of the Bishops of England, an ecclesiastical history from 597 to 1125; and the New History, a continuation of his earlier work from 1126 to 1142. He is the most important historian since the time of Bede, to whom he deliberately set himself to be a successor; and he had a high idea of a historian's duty, trying to trace causes and describe characters, as well as to record events.

The copy here exhibited [Royal MS. 13 D. ii.] was written in the 12th century, probably in the author's own life-time. It belonged to the Abbey of Margam, which was founded by Robert, Earl of Gloucester, to whom William of Malmesbury dedicated his history.

The passage selected for exhibition and translation [Bk. III. § 245] describes the character of the English at the time of the Norman Conquest.

"That day [of the battle of Hastings] was fatal to England,—the day of the miserable downfall of their beloved country and of submission to new masters. Submission had indeed long been familiar to the English, who had changed greatly in the course of time. In the first years of their arrival they had the appearance and bearing of barbarians, they were practised in war, their worship was savage; but afterwards, when they had adopted the Christian faith, the peace which they enjoyed led them gradually, as time went on, to regard the use of arms as of but secondary importance and to devote themselves entirely to religion. I am not speaking of the poor, whose lack of means generally restrains them within the bounds of right; and I pass over the clergy, who are deterred from error not only by the consideration of their profession, but often also by the fear of shame. I speak of the kings, who by reason of their power could indulge their desires as they chose; yet of them, some in their own country, and some at Rome, put off their kingly garb and gained the heavenly kingdom, making a blessed exchange, while many who to all appearance gave themselves to the world throughout their lives did so that they might scatter their treasures to the poor or distribute them to monasteries. What shall I say of the great army of bishops, hermits, abbots? Does not the whole island so shine with these relics of the old inhabitants, that you can scarcely pass a single village of any size without hearing the name of a new saint? And how many more are lost to memory for want of chroniclers? But as time went on the study of letters and of religion decayed, shortly before the arrival of the Normans. The clergy, content with a smattering of literary knowledge, could scarce stammer the words of the sacraments; one who knew grammar was a prodigy and marvel to the rest. . . . The custom of drinking together was universal, the night as well as the day being spent in this pursuit. They expended great sums, while living in small and contemptible dwellings; unlike the French and Normans, who live at a moderate rate in large and splendid buildings. Drunkenness was followed by the vices akin to it, which sap the vigour of a man. Hence it came about that they encountered William with rashness and headlong fury rather than military science, and after one battle, and that a very easy one [!], they surrendered themselves and their country into serfdom."

7. HENRY OF HUNTINGDON, Historia Anglorum. This work forms an exception to the rule that mediæval history was the work of monks. Its author was probably a native of Huntingdon, born about 1080, and brought up in the palace of Bishop Blouet of Lincoln; and between 1110 and 1120 he was made archdeacon of Huntingdon. The history begins with Cæsar's invasion, and in its first edition ended in 1129; subsequent additions brought it down to the death of Stephen in 1154. The greater part of it is derived from Bede and the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. As a historian, Henry of Huntingdon is intelligent, but easy-going, and prefers moralisation to research.

The copy exhibited [Arundel MS. 48] was written about the end of the 12th century. It formerly belonged to the priory of Southwick, in Hampshire.

The passage selected [Bk. VI. § 38] contains a description of the character of the Normans at the time of the Conquest. It therefore forms a companion picture to the character of the English at the same time given by William of Malmesbury [see no. 6].

“In the 21st year of king William, since now the Normans had fulfilled the righteous will of God upon the people of England, and scarcely any prince of the English race was left in England, but all had been reduced to slavery and mourning, so that the very name of Englishman was become a reproach, William, the author of this punishment, ended his life. For God had chosen the Normans for the extermination of the English race, because He saw that they excelled all people in the quality of unrivalled savagery. Their nature is such that, when they have crushed their enemies so far that they can go no further, they turn to crush one another and reduce themselves and their lands to poverty and desolation; and always the Norman lords, when they have destroyed their enemies and can no longer vent their cruelty on them, destroy their own people as though they were enemies. This is continually more and more evident in Normandy and England, in Apulia, Calabria, Sicily and Antioch, in short, in all the lands which God has subjected to them. Hence in England unjust taxes and iniquitous customs have multiplied exceedingly in these days. All the princes were so blinded by greed of gold and silver that it could be truly said of them, ‘None asks whence a man has money, but have it he must.’ The more they talked of right, the greater the wrong that was done. Those who were called Justices were at the head of every injustice. The sheriffs and officers whose duty was to execute judgment and justice were worse than thieves and robbers and fiercer than the fiercest. The king himself, when he had leased all his lands at as high a rent as possible, would continually break his pledged word and give them to another who offered more, and then to another, caring for nothing except increase of gain.”

8. ROGER OF HOVEDEN, Chronica. Roger of Hoveden, or Howden, in Yorkshire, had a very different training from that of most mediæval historians. He was not a monk, but a secular cleric, and, having obtained a post in the household of Henry II., was employed on the king's service in embassies and negotiations, and finally as an itinerant Justice. He is consequently a representative of the Civil Service of his day. After 1189 he retired, and died probably soon after 1201. His Chronicle provides an interesting example of the methods of the early historians, who incorporated their predecessors' works in their own with the utmost freedom. It begins where Bede ends, in 731, and ends in 1201. For the part from 731 to 1148 he simply copied an earlier Chronicle, written at Durham, called The History of the English since the death of Bede, which was itself compounded from the histories of Simeon of Durham [see no. 5] and Henry of Huntingdon [see no. 7]; while, to go still further back, Simeon's history was largely derived from Florence of Worcester and an early Northumbrian Chronicle coming down to 802. From 1148 to 1169 Hoveden's narrative appears to be original, though partly based on the Chronicle of the Abbey of Melrose, and the lives and letters of Becket. From 1170 to 1192 his work is merely a revision of the Chronicle ascribed to Benedict of Peterborough. Finally, from 1192 to 1201, he is an original and independent witness. Hoveden is the last of the line of northern historians, and, as just shown, he incorporates much of his predecessors' work. In style he is moderate and impartial.

The copy exhibited [Royal MS. 14 C. ii.] is contemporary with the author; it is probably the original text as finally written out, and has marginal notes which may be in the author's own hand. It only contains the Chronicle as far as the year 1180; the second volume, containing the rest, is in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.

The passage selected is a description of a striking scene in Becket's career, his appearance at the Council of Northampton in 1164.

"So after the celebration of mass the archbishop [Becket] put on his stole and black canonical cope and proceeded at once to the court of the king. And immediately there was a great concourse of people from all sides, to see the end. But he bore his cross in his right hand, while with his left he held the reins of the horse whereon he rode. And when he had come to the hall of the king he dismounted and entered the king's house, carrying his cross. Then he entered the outer chamber, bearing his cross, alone; for none of his people followed him. And when he had entered he found much people there, and sat down among them. The king meanwhile was in the inner chamber with his intimate associates. Then came Gilbert, bishop of London, who was of the king's party, to the archbishop, and rebuked him warmly because he thus came armed with his cross to the court; and he tried to snatch the cross from his hands, but the archbishop held it firmly. But Henry, bishop of Winchester, said to the bishop of London, 'Brother, let the archbishop hold his cross; for he ought rightly to bear it.' Then the bishop of London was very angry with the bishop of Winchester, and said to him, 'You have spoken ill, brother, and therefore evil shall befall you, because you have spoken against the king.' Then came to him Roger, archbishop of York.

'How oft he thought to come with kindly words
And gently make request.'

[Ovid, Metam. III. 376.]

But the old fire of hatred came between, and would not let him speak peaceably; on the contrary, he reproached him bitterly because he thus came armed with his cross to the court, saying that the king had a sharper sword, and if the king would be guided by his advice, he would take away the archbishop's cross. But one of the bystanders said :

'Trust me, if thou trust him thou'lt be deceived.
Sweet sings the bird-call till the bird be caught:
Under sweet honey deadly poison lurks.'

[Ovid, Am. I. viii. 104.]

But the archbishop of Canterbury would not lay down his cross, and said, 'If the king's sword slays the fleshly body, yet my sword slays in the spirit, and sends the soul to hell.'

9. RICHARD FITZ-NEAL, Dialogus de Scaccario. This work is not, strictly speaking, a history, but it contains very valuable material for the early constitutional history of England. It is a Latin treatise, in the form of a dialogue between a master and pupil, on the nature and procedure of the Court of Exchequer. In this court, under the Norman kings, "the whole financial business of the country was transacted, and as the whole administration of justice, and even the military organisation, was dependent upon the fiscal officers, the whole framework of society may be said to have passed annually under its review. It derived its name from the chequered cloth which covered the table at which the accounts were taken" (Stubbs). The author was Richard Fitz-Neal, Bishop of London and Treasurer of the Exchequer under Henry II., and the Dialogue was written in 1176-1178.

The copy here exhibited [Cotton MS. Cleop. A. xvi.] was written in the 14th century; and the selected passage is the opening of the work.

"In the 23rd year of king Henry II., as I was sitting in the window of a chamber overlooking the river Thames, I heard the voice of one speaking to me eagerly, saying, 'Master, hast thou not read that there is no value in hidden knowledge or in hidden treasure?' I answered, 'Yes,' and he at once proceeded 'Why then do you not teach to others the knowledge of the Exchequer which you are said to possess so plentifully? Why do you not commit it to writing, lest it perish with you?' Then I said, 'Why, brother, you have long sat in the Exchequer yourself, and nothing can have escaped you, since you are so carefully observant; and probably the same is the case with the others who sit there.' He, however, replied, 'As those who walk in darkness and grope with their hands frequently stumble, so do many sit there who seeing see not, and hearing understand not.' . . . Then said I, 'I see you are getting angry. But calm yourself; I will do what you urge me. Come, rise and sit down opposite me, and ask me of the matters which trouble you . . .'

Pupil. What is the Exchequer?

Master. The Exchequer is a rectangular table, about ten feet in length and five in width, placed like a dinner-table with persons seated at it. It has a ledge about four fingers high all round it, that nothing which has been placed upon it may fall off. Upon the table is placed a cloth, which is bought each year in Easter term. The cloth is not of any kind you please, but a black cloth marked out by lines, at a distance of a foot or a hand's-breadth apart. On the spaces thus marked out are counters, ranged in their proper order, as will be explained presently. And though the name of 'chequer' is properly applied to a table such as this, it is transferred also to the court which is held in the presence of the chequer. Accordingly, if any decision has been made by the common council of the realm on any matter, it is said to have been done at the Exchequer of such and such a year."

10. JOCELIN OF BRAKELONDE, Chronica. This is not a history of the country in the ordinary sense of the term, but is an example of the more domestic chronicles of a monastery, from which much may be learnt with regard to the ordinary life of the people. Jocelin of Brakelonde was an inmate of the great monastery of St. Edmund at Bury St. Edmunds, and his chronicle records the history of the monastery under the able and vigorous Abbot Samson [1182-1202], with a short sketch of his predecessor, Abbot Hugh. It gives a graphic picture of life in and around a monastery, and of the difficulties in which the monastery might be involved; and it has a special interest as having been taken by Carlyle as the basis of his Past and Present.

The manuscript here exhibited [Harley MS. 1005] is the only extant copy of the book, and was written in the 13th century. It belonged formerly to Bishop Stillingfleet of Worcester.

The passage selected describes the part taken by Abbot Samson, who, by virtue of his office, was summoned to the Great Council [the predecessor of Parliament] at the time of the imprisonment of King Richard Cœur de Lion in Austria. It also narrates an incident in the domestic life of the monastery.

"When the report reached London of the capture of king Richard and of his imprisonment in Germany, and the barons had met to take counsel on the matter, the abbot sprang forward in the midst of them all and said that he was ready to go and seek his Lord the King, either in disguise or in any other way, until he found him and got certain news of him; by which saying he acquired great praise for himself. . . . When there was war in England, during the captivity of king Richard, the abbot in full convent solemnly excommunicated all makers of war and disturbers of the peace, not fearing Earl John, the king's brother, or any one else; whence he was called 'the magnanimous abbot.' After which he went to the siege of Windsor and bore arms, together with some other abbots of England, having his own standard and leading a large number of soldiers at great expense. We monks, however, thought it a dangerous thing to do, for fear of the consequences, lest perchance any future abbot should be compelled to go off warlike expeditions in his own person. . . .

"On another occasion four and twenty young men, sons of noblemen, came with their followers to engage in a tilting match [in defiance of an edict of the abbot]; and after it was over they returned to the town to seek lodging. The abbot, however, hearing of it, ordered the gates to be closed and the whole party shut in. The next day was the vigil of St. Peter and St. Paul. Accordingly, having given a pledge not to depart except by leave, they dined that day with the abbot; but after dinner, when the abbot had retired to his chamber, they all started up and began carolling and singing, sending into the town for wine, drinking, and afterwards howling, totally depriving the abbot and convent of their sleep; doing all this in derision of the abbot, and spending in such fashion the whole day until the evening, nor would they desist at the abbot's order. Night coming on, they broke the bolts of the town gates, and went off by violence. The abbot, however, solemnly excommunicated them all, by the advice of archbishop Hubert, who at that time was Justiciar; and many of them came in for repentance, begging for absolution."

11. WILLIAM OF NEWBURGH, Historia Anglicana. William, surnamed Petit, or the Small, was born in 1136 and entered the abbey of Newburgh in Yorkshire. He became famous in the neighbourhood as a student of history, and undertook his principal work, the English History, at the special request of the Abbot and Convent of Rievaulx. It begins with a short summary from the Conquest to 1135, but from the accession of Stephen to 1198, where it ends, it is a detailed and contemporary history, written with judgment and impartiality, but generally in a rather dry style.

The copy exhibited [Stowe MS. 62] was written in or soon after the author's life-time, and belonged to the abbey of Newburgh.

The selected passage [Bk. IV., Ch. xxxviii.] describes the extraordinary efforts made to raise the sum necessary to ransom Richard I. from his captivity, in 1193.

"At that time the king of the English, being very weary of his long imprisonment, frequently urged the administrators of his kingdom and all his adherents who seemed to have any influence to provide the sum necessary for his ransom, and so expedite his release. Accordingly the royal officers pressed the matter forward in all the borders of England, sparing none. No distinction was made between layman and cleric, secular and monastic clergy, town and country; all alike, according to the amount of their property or of their revenues, were compelled to pay for the ransom of the king. Privileges, prerogatives, and immunities of churches and monasteries were null and void. Rank and exemption were reduced to silence. None might say, 'I am such an one,' or 'I am of such a position; have me excused.' Even the monks of the Cistercian order, who had hitherto been exempt from all royal imposts, were now charged with a greater load in proportion to their previous escape from public burdens; for the wool of their flocks, which is notoriously the chief item of their property, and which supplies the place of all other revenue for general uses and necessary expenditure, they were now forced and compelled to give up. It was supposed that the masses of money thus swept together would exceed the total of the king's ransom; but when the separate collections were united at London, it was found not to reach that amount. This was believed to be due to fraud on the part of the collectors. Then, on account of the insufficiency of the first collection, the royal officials made a second and a third, despoiling all the richer persons and cloaking barefaced plunder with the honourable pretext of the king's ransom. Lastly, that no resource might be left untried, and that what the palmerworm had left the locust might eat, and what the locust had left the cankerworm might eat, and what the cankerworm had left the caterpillar might eat, hands were laid upon the sacred vessels themselves."

12. MATTHEW PARIS, Historia Anglorum. The greatest of all the monastic schools of history was that of St. Albans, and the greatest of the St. Albans historians was Matthew Paris. The Scriptorium, or literary department, of this abbey was established between 1077 and 1093; and the office of historiographer, or writer of history, was created between 1166 and 1183. The first St. Albans chronicle was probably the work of John de Cella, abbot of St. Albans from 1195–1215. This extends from the Creation to 1188, and is a compilation from the Bible and earlier historians and romancers, of an entirely uncritical character. Roger of Wendover, historiographer of the abbey early in the 13th century, continued this compilation from 1189 to 1201, and carried on the history from 1201 to 1235 as an original historian. The whole work down to 1235 frequently passed under Wendover's name, and with the title of Flores Historiarum. In 1236, on Wendover's death, Matthew Paris, who had entered the monastery in 1217, succeeded him as historiographer. He then transcribed Wendover's work with additions and corrections of his own, and continued it as far as 1259. This entire work constitutes the Greater Chronicles which pass under Paris's name, being partly his own, and partly a re-editing of his predecessor's work. But he also wrote an independent History of the English, or Lesser History, extending from 1067 to 1253, rehandling his materials according to his own judgment instead of simply adopting the records of his predecessors. As a contemporary historian Matthew Paris is invaluable. He had ample means of collecting information and material, he was acquainted with the leading men of the day, including King Henry III., who even invited him to be present on an important occasion that he might be able to record it accurately. He is a lively and vigorous writer, criticising freely and with much independence, and supporting the popular cause against the king's misgovernment, and especially against the aggressions and extortions of the Pope's legates. He died in 1259.

The copy here exhibited [Royal MS. 14 C. vii.] is in all probability Matthew's own copy of his Lesser History, written by himself. It belonged successively to Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, John Russell, Bishop of Lincoln, Henry VIII., Henry Fitz-Alan, Earl of Arundel, and John, Lord Lumley, after whose death, in 1609, it was bought with the rest of his library for Henry, Prince of Wales, and so passed into the Royal Library, presented to the nation by George II. in 1757.

The passage selected describes the death of King John in 1216. The translation is slightly condensed in a few places.

"King John then marched rapidly northwards, all the inhabitants fleeing before his face, as at the approach of a hurricane. Arriving at the place called Well-stream, which is a mixture of sea and river water, he was foolhardy enough to cross without a guide; and, while he himself escaped with difficulty, his carriages, containing his plunder and booty and all his treasure and furniture, were irrecoverably lost. For there is open ground in the midst of the water, of the kind called a quicksand, which sucked in everything, men, horses, arms, tents, victuals, and all that the king held dearest on earth, next to his life. The next night he slept at the Abbey of Swineshead, very melancholy and depressed, and so much afflicted at his loss as to fall into an acute fever, much increased by his habitual over-eating and drinking. . . . [A litter was made for him, but it jolted him severely.] And being now overtaken by the pains of death, he was compelled to descend from the litter, saying 'That confounded, that accursed litter has shaken all my bones to pieces; nay, it has nearly killed me.' . . . [After the administration of the Sacrament] one of those that sat near said 'Our Lord Jesus, when about to die for us, prayed for his persecutors, leaving us a good example. You should likewise abandon all your anger and bitterness against those who owe you ought.' To which he answered with a sigh, 'It is very hard for me to abandon my anger against those who try to drive me from my throne and to aid my chiefest enemy, and who still follow me with their persecution.' . . . And his friend who had spoken first pressed the king urgently, lest his soul should be in peril, urging him for the love of Christ and for the safety of his soul to abandon his ill-will towards all the barons. Then the king, who was now at the last gasp, groaning from the depth of his heart with a lamentable sigh, said 'If I may not be saved otherwise, be it as you have persuaded me.'"

13. ADAM MURIMUTH, Continuatio Chronicarum. Adam Murimuth, born in 1275, was Doctor of Civil Law at Oxford, and acted for his University and for the Chapter of Canterbury in legal matters. He was also frequently employed on diplomatic service by King Edward II., and was Canon successively of Hereford and St. Paul's. His Continuation of the Chronicles (which he began to write after 1325) starts from the year 1303, but until 1337 it is very meagre in its information. In 1337 Murimuth retired to the rectory of Wraysbury, and from this point his history becomes full and interesting. He continued it year by year down to his death in 1347. It is of particular value for the campaigns of Edward III. in France.

The copy exhibited [Royal MS. 13 A. xviii.] was written about the middle of the 14th century, very soon after Murimuth's death.

The passage selected describes the Battle of Sluys in 1340, the first great victory of the English navy.

“And on the Thursday [22 June] before the feast of the Nativity of St. John the Baptist the wind was good, and the king made a favourable start on his voyage. And on the Friday following, that is, on the eve of St. John, he saw the French fleet drawn up in the port of La Swyne, as it were in order of battle; and for the whole of that day he considered what would be best to do. And on the feast of St. John the Baptist [24 June], early in the morning, the French fleet, dividing itself into three divisions, moved out the distance of one mile towards the fleet of the king of England. When the king of England saw this, he exclaimed that he would wait no longer, but at once prepared himself and his men for battle. Accordingly, shortly after the ninth hour, having the wind and the sun behind him and the tide in his favour, he divided his fleet similarly into three divisions and attacked the French. Then was fought a great sea fight, for the ships furnished by Spain and France for the battle were great and strong. Nevertheless the English defeated the French and boarded the ships of their first division, to wit, one very great ship called the St. Denis, and another called the St. George, and others, such as the Christopher and the Black Cog, which the French had previously captured by treachery in the port of La Swyne, as narrated above. In this first engagement fought the Earl of Gloucester, the Earl of Northampton, the Earl of Huntingdon, who was chief and admiral of the ships of the Cinque Ports, Sir Robert de Morley, who was admiral and chief of the northern ships, to wit, those of Yarmouth and Lynn and the other ships from the north, and many other noblemen. When then the first division of the French had been defeated, though with great difficulty, they attacked the second division, which they defeated more easily, many of the crews leaping into the sea of their own accord; and they captured their ships in the twilight. Night now coming on, they resolved, partly on account of the darkness, partly from excessive fatigue, to rest till day. But the ships of the third French division resolved to make their escape under cover of night; and about thirty of them actually escaped. One, however, called the James de Depe, thought in its flight to capture a ship of Sandwich, belonging to the prior of Christ Church, Canterbury; but her crew resisted, with the help of the Earl of Huntingdon. The combat lasted till morning, but finally the English defeated the Normans and took their ship, in which they found over four hundred men killed.

14. CHRONICLE OF ST. ALBANS, 1328–1388. After the death of Matthew Paris [see no. 12], the St. Albans chronicle was carried on from 1259 to 1272 by a writer who, from diffidence at following so great a historian as Matthew, conceals his name. William Rishanger [born 1250] seems to have been the next historiographer, and continued the history from 1272 to 1306. From 1307 to 1323, John de Trokelowe was the chronicler, and for 1323 and 1324 Henry de Blanford. For the next few years there is a gap, and then comes the present chronicle, the author of which is unknown. It has a special value as containing by far the fullest account of the important years 1376 and 1377. The author bitterly attacks John of Gaunt, who was the patron of Wycliffe; and when Henry IV., son of John of Gaunt, came to the throne, this chronicle was suppressed, and a much toned-down version substituted, which is preserved in the Royal MS. 13 E. ix. This latter chronicle extends from 1272 to 1392, thus re-covering all the ground worked over by the historians mentioned above, and is believed to be the work of Thomas Walsingham, who was chief copyist at St. Albans in 1396, and lived till 1420 or later. He may perhaps have had some share in the original chronicle of 1328-1388, but of this it is impossible to be certain. The Historia Anglicana, which passes under Walsingham's name, is a compilation from this chronicle and other sources, notably Higden's Polychronicon [see no. 16], extending from 1272 to 1422. This is the last of the great series of St. Albans Chronicles which is also a general history of England.

The copy exhibited [Harl. MS. 3634] was written in the 14th century. Some leaves from it have been incorporated in the Bodleian MS. 316 at Oxford. It formerly belonged to Archbishop Matthew Parker.

The passage selected is from the description of the trial of Wycliffe at St. Paul's in 1377. It is part of the narrative which is suppressed in the revised version by Walsingham.

"Accordingly, on the Thursday before the feast of the Chair of St. Peter [19 Feb. 1377], the son of perdition, John Wycliffe, was to appear before the Bishops, that a decision might be had concerning the marvels which proceeded out of his mouth, by the teaching, as was believed, of Satan, the adversary of the whole Church. Then after the ninth hour, attended by the Duke [John of Gaunt] and Lord Henry Percy and some others, who by their rank might overawe the weak-hearted, and followed by the aforementioned Mendicants, that if any crumb should fall from the rich men's table,—that is, if any unrefined words should escape from the Bishops' mouths,—they might gather it up and gnaw it by way of scandal, that offering of abomination, the above-mentioned John, was brought in with great pomp. Nor could he be satisfied with common officers, except he were ushered by Lord Henry Percy, the Marshal of all England. . . . At this point the devil astutely found a way for bringing off his pupil, who should escape through the deaths of many from the hands of the Bishops; for he created a dissension between the great lords and the Bishops, that so the trial might be delayed. As the people thronged together and obstructed the passage of the lords and this same John, Lord Henry Percy, by an abuse of the power committed to him, miserably attacked the people in the church [St. Paul's]. The Bishop of London, seeing this, forbade him to exercise such authority in the church, and affirmed that, if he had known he intended to behave in such a manner there he would not have allowed him to enter the church. Then the Duke, hearing these words, gnashed his teeth and swore he should exercise authority there, whether the Bishop liked it or not. . . . Thus the Duke and the Bishops were greatly excited, alike by the insults which they hurled at one another and by the fury of the people which had been aroused. This happened, as we believe, by the device of the Enemy of mankind, who hoped that by an occasion of this kind that lying scoundrel might escape for that day from being confounded for his innovations. For he perceived that he [Wycliffe] would be useful to him in every way; and therefore he took care that such a champion of his party should not perish silently or without a struggle."

15. THOMAS ELMHAM, Vita Henrici Quinti. Thomas Elmham was a monk of St. Augustine's, Canterbury, and was treasurer of the monastery in 1407, and Prior of Lenton, in Nottinghamshire, in 1414. He wrote a history of the monastery of St. Augustine's and a Life of Henry V. The latter, which is here exhibited, is one of the chief authorities for the events of that reign, though written in a diffuse and pretentious style.

The copy exhibited [Cotton MS. Jul. E. iv.] was written in the 15th century. The passage selected [ch. 27] is part of the description of the battle of Agincourt.

"When the hostile lines had approached within twenty paces, not far from Agincourt, and the sound of the trumpets, rending the air with tremendous clamour, summoned the courage of the warriors to the battle, the enemy's force first moves forward, and advances against the English. At once the terrible fury of war arises greater and greater. On the one side, huge armed forces charge, in the ancient manner of conflict, with deadly spear-thrusts and eager sword-strokes and all other madnesses of war; the strong fastenings of armour are violently rent asunder; and noble warriors inflict on one another fatal wounds. On the other side, the warlike wedges of archers, covering the sky with clouds by their dense and powerful discharges, hurl forth, like storm-drops from a cloud of rain, an intolerable swarm of piercing arrows, breathing all their strength into the service of war and death. At the first conflict of the armies, the French cavalry, who had been posted with the object of charging down the archers and assailing the English in the rear, were met with a reiterated discharge of arrows, which wounded their horses and cast the riders to the earth or forced them to retreat, and so this great and formidable scheme was shattered to pieces at the beginning of the fight. . . . In this deadly struggle, it must be recorded, above all things, how that brilliant star of kings, the light and lamp of chivalry [Henry V.], exposed that precious treasure of his person to all the chances of war, and with the pre-eminent valour of his rank thundered with sudden panic and irresistible assault upon the enemy, in unslackening and noble war. Nor did the madness of battle so far respect the royal dignity as that he should escape the enemy's attacks and the heavy burden of wounds; for a part of the iron coronet which crowned his royal helmet was struck off by an enemy's blow. Verily if he had been but a chief of inferior rank among the fighting knights, he would yet have deserved the crown of honour above them all, for the excellent greatness of his noble valour."

16. RANULPH HIGDEN, Polychronicon. This work was the most popular history extant in the 14th and 15th centuries and even later. The author was a monk of the abbey of St. Werburgh, in Chester, and died in 1363. His chronicle is an universal history of the world in Latin, from the Creation to the time of Edward III., and it is preceded by a geographical description of the world, especially of Great Britain. In its first form the history closed at 1326, but the author subsequently brought it down to 1342; and continuations of it beyond this date were frequently made by other writers. As an independent authority it is not of much value; but it was the standard history of its day, and shows the condition of historical and geographical knowledge at that time. Its popularity is proved by the fact that, besides circulating largely in Latin, it was translated into English. The translator was John de Trevisa, chaplain to Lord Berkeley, who completed his work in 1387. On the invention of printing, Trevisa's translation was printed by Caxton, in a slightly modernised form, in the year 1482.

The copy exhibited [Add. MS. 24,194] is a manuscript of Trevisa's translation, written early in the 15th century. It was written for Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, who died in 1439, and whose wife was daughter and heiress of Thomas, Lord Berkeley, for whom Trevisa executed his translation. It belonged subsequently to Archbishop Tenison.

The passage selected [Bk. I., ch. 60] is from a description of the character of the English in Higden's time. The language is somewhat modernised, for the sake of intelligibility, Caxton's version being adopted whenever possible.

"The Engliche men that dwellen in Engeland and ben medled [=intermingled] in the island, that ben [=are] far from the places that they sprung of first, will lightly, without enticing of any other men, by their owne assent turn to contrary dedes; and so uneasy, also full impatient of peace, eager for business, and hating sloth, that when they have destroyed their enemies all to the ground, then they fight with them selves and slay each other, as a void and an empty stomach worketh in itself. Nevertheless men of the south ben easier and more mylde; and men of the north be more unstable, more cruel, and more uneasy. The middle men be somdele [=to some extent] partners with bothe. Also they give themselves to gluttony more than other men, and be more costly in mete and in drynke and in clothinge. . . . These men ben speedy both on horse and on foote, able and ready to all manner of dedes of armes, and they be wont to have the victorie and the masterie in every fight, where no treason is walkyng. And they ben curious and can well telle dedes and wonders that they have seen. Also they go in dyvers landes; unnethe [=hardly] ben any any men richer in their own land or more gracious in far and in strange landes. They can better win and get new things than keep their owne heritage; therefore it is that they be spred so wide and ween [=think] that every land is their owne. The men ben able to do all manner of sleight and wit, but before the dede blundering and hasty, and more wise after the dede; and they leave lightly what they have begonne. . . . These men dispise their owne and praise other men's, and unnethe [=hardly] be pleased with their owne estate; what befalleth and becometh other men, they gladly take to themselves; therefore it is that a yeoman arrays him as a squire, a squire as a knight, a knight as a duke, and a duke as a king."

17. THE CHRONICLE OF THE BRUT. This was one of the most popular histories of England in the 15th and 16th centuries. It was first written in French by an unknown author in the reign of Edward III., and took its name from the fact that it begins with the legendary colonisation of England by the Trojans under Brut or Brutus. In its earliest form it ends in 1332. A revised edition, in which the accounts of the reigns of Edward II. and Edward III. were enlarged, appeared shortly afterwards; and in 1435 this was translated into English by John Maundeville, rector of Burnham Thorpe in Norfolk. The history was then brought down to the year 1418, and in this shape it became very popular and was largely circulated. A further continuation was added to it, bringing the narrative down to 1436; and finally, on the invention of printing, Caxton continued it to the year 1460 and printed it in 1480. This edition, with additions and alterations, was frequently reprinted in the course of the next fifty years, but since then the chronicle has never been reprinted. The early part of the history is based upon the romance of Geoffrey of Monmouth (the source of most of the legends concerning early English history), and has no historical value; from the reign of Edward I. it has some original matter, but its chief interest is as the first popular history of England which circulated in the English language.

The copy exhibited [Add. MS. 33,242] was written in the 15th century. The passage selected is a criticism of English fashions of dress in the reign of Edward III. In the following transcript the spelling has been modernised.

"In this time Englishmen so much haunted and cleaved to the woodness [=madness] and folly of the strangers [that] from the time of the coming of the Hainaulters eighteen years passed they ordained and changed them every year divers shapes and disguising of clothing, of long, large and broad and wide clothes, destitute and dishert [=far removed] from all old honest and good usage; and another time short clothes and strait waisted, jagged and cut on every side, slatenyd [slashed] and buttoned with sleeves and tippets of surcoats and hoods over long and large and over much hanging, that, [if] I sooth shall say, they were [more] like to tormentors and devils in their clothing and showing and other array than to men. And the women more nicely yet passed the men in array and curiosity. . . . The which disguising and pride peradventure afterwards brought forth and caused many mishaps and mischiefs in the realm of England."

EARLY BIBLICAL MSS.

[Exhibited in Cases G—K, against the pilasters, beginning on the right of the entrance to the King's Library.]

Case G.

1. THE BIBLE, in Greek: a volume of the celebrated "CODEX ALEXANDRINUS," written in uncial letters, in double columns, on very thin vellum, probably in the middle of the 5th century. One of the three earliest and most important MSS. of the Holy Scriptures, containing both Old and New Testaments and the Epistles of St. Clement of Rome. It formerly belonged to the Patriarchal Chamber at Alexandria (whence its name), and was presented in 1628 to King Charles I. by Cyril Lucar, Patriarch of Constantinople, and previously of Alexandria. [Royal MS. 1 D. viii.]

In the same case are exhibited, for the sake of comparison, photographs of the only two MSS. of the Greek Bible which are older than the Codex Alexandrinus, viz. (1), Codex Vaticanus (B), in the Vatican Library at Rome, originally containing the whole Bible, but now wanting most of Genesis, the Pastoral Epistles, and the Apocalypse; (2) Codex Sinaiticus (S), discovered by Tischendorf at Mount Sinai in 1844, of which some leaves are in the Hof-Bibliothek at Leipzig, and the rest (including the whole of the New Testament, the Epistle of Barnabas, and the Shepherd of Hermas) in the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg. These two MSS. are assigned to the 4th century.

In the lower division of the case is:—

2. THE GOSPEL OF ST. LUKE, in Greek (CODEX NITRIENSIS). A palimpsest manuscript (one, that is, in which the original writing has been partially washed out, and another work written above it), containing portions of St. Luke's Gospel, with a Syriac treatise by Severus of Antioch written above it. The original writing is in large uncials of the 6th century, written in double columns, with enlarged initials projecting into the margin; the Syriac is of the beginning of the 9th century, written in double columns in a direction at right angles to the Greek. The MS. formerly belonged to the Syrian convent of St. Mary Deipara in the Nitrian Desert in Egypt. Vellum. [Add. MS. 17,211.]

Case H.

3. THE BIBLE, in Latin, of St. Jerome's version (commonly known as the Vulgate), as revised by Alcuin of York, then Abbot of Tours, by command of the Emperor Charlemagne, between A.D. 796 and 801. The present copy was probably written about A.D. 840, and is adorned with large miniatures and numerous initial letters in gold and silver. Vellum. [Add. MS. 10,546.]

Case I.

4. THE BIBLE, in Latin, of St. Jerome's version. Written by Goderannus and Ernestus, monks of the Abbey of St. Remacle at Stabloo or Stavelot, in Belgium, and illuminated and bound within four years ending in A.D. 1097. Vellum. Two volumes, both exhibited, one in the lower division of the case. [Add. MSS. 28,106, 28,107.]

Case K.

5. THE BIBLE in the earlier English version of Wycliffe, beginning with the Book of Proverbs; with illuminated initials and borders. Late 14th century. The MS. belonged to Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, youngest son of Edward III., who was put to death by his nephew, Richard II., in 1397. His shield of arms is introduced into the illuminated border of the first page. Vellum. [Egerton MS. 617.]

HISTORICAL DEEDS AND PAPYRI.

[In frames fixed against the wainscot on either side of the entrance to the King's Library.]

On the East Side.

A series of PAPYRI, four of which are written in Coptic, and one in Greek, relating to the Monastery of St. Phœbammon, near Hermonthis in Egypt; of the 8th and 9th centuries. [Papyri lxxvi-lxxix, lxxxi.]

On the West Side.

1. Instrument written in Latin, on papyrus, 8½ feet in length by 1 foot in width, containing a deed of sale of a house and lands in the territory of Rimini; dated at Ravenna, 3 June, in the 7th year of the reign of Justin the Younger [A.D. 572]. [Add. MS. 5412.]
2. Deed of sale of a slave-boy, in Latin, whereby C. Fabullius Macer, an officer on the vessel "Tigris," in the Misenatian squadron of the Roman fleet, purchases a boy named Abbas or Eutyches, aged seven years, of Eastern nationality, from Q. Julius Priscus, a soldier on the same vessel, for 200 denarii. Dated at Seleucia Pieria, in Syria, 24 May, A.D. 166; with autograph signatures of the parties and witnesses, whose seals are ranged along the top of the document. Written on papyrus in a large cursive hand of early type; the signatures in similar hands, but generally smaller. [Pap. ccxxix.]
3. Charter of the Emperor Conrad III., granting to Corbey Abbey, in Westphalia, the adjacent Nunnery of Keminada. Dated at Frankfort, 1147. Latin. A contemporary copy, written in gold upon purple vellum. [Egerton Ch. 620.]
4. Photograph of the MAGNA CHARTA of KING JOHN. Dated at Runnymede, 15 June, in the 17th year of his reign [A.D. 1215]. A fragment only of the Great Seal remains, and the document itself was so much damaged by the fire of 1731 at Ashburnham

- House as to be almost illegible. The original was given to Sir Robert Cotton, probably by Sir Edward Dering, in 1630, and is now in the Department. [Cotton Ch. xiii. 31.]
5. Collotype facsimile of a contemporary and official copy of the MAGNA CHARTA, which was given to Sir Robert Cotton by Humphry Wyems in 1628, and is now in the Department.* [Cotton MS. Augustus ii. 106.]
 6. Original Act constituting a Municipal Council for the city of Cologne; and having appended the seals of the various Guilds. Dated, 14 Sept. 1396. [Add. Ch. 13,946]. Presented, in 1858, by Octavius Morgan, Esq., M.P.
 7. Original Bull of POPE LEO X., conferring on King Henry VIII. the title of Defender of the Faith; dated at Rome, 5 id. [11] Oct., in the 9th year of his pontificate [A.D. 1521]. Signed by the Pope and many of the Cardinals. It was much damaged in the fire of 1731. [Cotton MS. Vit. B. iv. f. 226.]
 8. Grant by Mahomet II., Sultan of the Ottoman Turks, to the Genoese inhabitants of Galata (the suburb of Constantinople) of special privileges for residence and trade; the origin of the "Capitulations" regulating the position of foreign residents in Constantinople. Greek. With the monogram of the Sultan at the top, and the signature of the vizier Saganos at the bottom, in Arabic. Dated in the week following the capture of Constantinople by the Turks [29 May, 1453]. ILLUMINATED MANUSCRIPTS.

[In Cases 1-7 in the Grenville Library, beginning on the left as the visitor enters from the Hall.]

An illuminated MS. is one enriched with gold and colours, in miniatures, in borders wholly or partially surrounding the text, and in ornamental initials. Of the selection here shown, Nos. 1-9 are examples of the Byzantine school dating from the 10th to the 13th century, and characterised by a rigid conventionalism, most apparent in the stereotyped figures and attitudes of the Four Evangelists in copies of the Gospels. The colours are opaque and sombre, and the backgrounds are of gold or in monochrome. A marked feature of Greek MSS. is the rectangular headpiece, the designs of which have often a striking resemblance to oriental carpet-patterns. A freer style of Byzantine work may be seen in the delicate marginal illustrations in No. 3. The same case also contains a few English MSS. of the 10th and 11th centuries (Nos. 10-15). They illustrate the two styles of book-decoration practised at the time in the south of England, in one of which thick body-colours and gold are employed, with elaborate borders of foliage and interlaced work, while in the other style borders are absent and the figures are sketched freely in outline and only lightly touched or washed with colour. The curious fluttering appearance of the drapery and the unnatural length of the limbs, hands, and feet will also be noticed.

In the other cases, illuminated MSS. of different countries are brought together for comparison, and the progress of the art may be traced from the 12th century to its final decline in the 16th. Generally speaking, in the 12th century the figure-drawing is bold, the colours thickly laid on, and the background of highly burnished gold. The initials are often of large size, and are filled with intricate masses of foliage, amid which figures of various kinds are sometimes introduced. In the 13th century a minuter and more refined style came into use. The features, hair, and drapery are more carefully treated, and latterly the body becomes more flexible; delicate little miniatures occupy the interior of the initials, and plain gold grounds begin to give place to diapers and other patterns in gold and colours. This style reached its perfection in the 14th century, the finest period of the art in Western Europe. English and French MSS. may be chiefly distinguished by the colouring, the English preferring lighter tones, especially of blue and green, the French a deep blue and other more brilliant colours, together with a ruddy, copper-like gold. Flemish work is recognisable by its heavy outlines and generally dark colours.

Meanwhile the border also developed. At first a mere prolongation of a limb of the initial, terminating in a simple volute or bud, it gradually extends the whole height of the text, turns the corners along the top and bottom, and ultimately surrounds the page on all four sides, branching out more and more in the process into foliage, flowers, scroll-work, and other ornamentation. French borders of the 15th century (see Cases 4-6) are largely of the so-called "ivy-leaf" pattern, which in its simpler form dates from the century preceding.

It consists of delicate thread-like sprigs, with small tri-dentate leaves, generally richly gilt. This pattern frequently overruns the whole of a wide margin, and is latterly combined with gaily-painted flowers, birds, grotesques, etc., small miniatures also being sometimes inserted at intervals. A typical example of the form taken by a border of the English school just before its extinction is shown in Case 6, No. 59, and may be usefully compared with the earlier border in Case 3, No. 35, and with that in the large English Bible in the MS. Saloon (Case K). A different style was evolved by Flemish artists, the border, consisting of a broad band of colour or flat gold, serving as a ground for minutely realistic flowers, fruit, insects, jewels, etc.

In miniatures of the 15th century, among other changes in the direction of realism, diapered and other ornamental backgrounds were gradually supplanted by landscape. This was at first rude and conventional, with impossible rocks and trees, and no attempt at perspective; but as the century drew near its end the drawing became more accurate and the scenery truer to nature. In England, largely owing, no doubt, to the Wars of the Roses, miniature art was practically dead soon after the middle of the century, and before 1500 the productions of the French school, now become hard, tasteless and overladen, were surpassed by those of Flemish artists. The latter are remarkable for depth and softness of colour, power of expression, and fine landscape effects.

The Italian school of illumination is less well represented, and the few examples available fail to do it anything like justice. The revival of the art began later in Italy than further north, and the earliest MS. exhibited (Case 3, No. 36) is of the 14th century, and shows a strong Byzantine influence. No. 37 is more distinctively Italian; the somewhat stunted figures, greenish flesh-tints, and heavy drapery, together with the peculiar red and other colours, being marked characteristics. The elementary border consists of foliated scrolls springing from the initial, surrounded by exterior spots or studs of gold. Developments of this style may be seen in Cases 4 and 5 (No. 50). In illumination, as in other branches of art, the Italians advanced rapidly in the 15th century, and eventually they proved successful rivals of the Flemings, the best of their miniatures being exquisitely finished works of art, and the borders frequently marvels of invention, richness and grace. A familiar type of ornamentation is formed of a twining vine-pattern, generally in white or gold upon a coloured ground. This is used both in borders and initials, and seems to have been a revival of the interlaced Lombardic work of the 11th and 12th centuries (see in MS. Saloon, Case C, No. 101, Case D, No. 129). Beautiful borders were also composed of the most delicate flower and scroll work, studded with glittering spots of gold (No. 68); and in another style the text was enclosed within rectangular panels, richly painted in crimson, blue and green, and covered with floreated and other designs in gold and colours (No. 66). Both these styles were afterwards much elaborated, the artists availing themselves of the resources of the classical renaissance, and adding graceful candelabra, trophies and vases, medallions with portrait-busts and copies of antique gems, Cupids, fawns, sphinxes, etc., and wonderfully realistic pearls, rubies and other jewels. This brilliant period, however, was of brief duration. Not long after 1500 the art declined in Italy, as it had done elsewhere, and illuminated MSS. became a mere vehicle for the display of technical skill without refinement or good taste.

BINDINGS OF MSS.

1. The Four Gospels, in Latin; probably written in N. W. Germany, late 10th century. Bound in thick wooden boards, covered with leather. In the upper cover is a sunk panel, which, together with the surrounding frame, is overlaid with copper-gilt; the frame is also studded with large crystals. The metal in the panel has a scale pattern repoussé, the sunk edges being covered with small leaves, etc. In the centre is a seated figure of Christ, in high relief, the eyes formed by two black beads; and at the four corners are small squares of champlevé enamel, in blue, green and red, added not earlier than the 14th century. [Add. MS. 21,921.]
2. The Four Gospels, etc., in Greek: 10th century. Byzantine binding, 12th century (?), of wooden boards, covered with (tarnished) crimson velvet and lined with fine canvas richly embroidered in coloured silks. Round the upper cover are nailed thin plates of silver-gilt, with figures in relief, probably contemporary with the MS. The plates along the top and bottom contain half-lengths of the Four Evangelists, St. Peter and St. Paul, with their names. The plates at the sides apparently represent the overthrow of the heresiarchs Nestorius and Noetus in three designs, with inscriptions. A central plate, of much later work, represents Christ between the Virgin and St. John, all with enamelled nimbi. [Add. MS. 28,815.]
3. Gospels of SS. Luke and John, in Latin; written in Germany, 13th century. Bound in thick wooden boards, covered with leather stained red. In the upper cover is a sunk panel of Limoges enamel on copper-gilt, of the end of the 13th century: Christ in glory, within a vesica, with the symbols of the Evangelists at the corners, the figures gilt, with heads in relief. Plates of enamel, of leaf-and-flower pattern, are attached to the outer frame. The colours used are shades of blue, light green, yellow, white and red. The shelving sides of the sunk recess are covered with thin plates of copper-gilt, worked in diamond pattern. [Add. MS. 27,926.] Presented, in 1868, by the executors of Felix Slade, Esq.

4. The Four Gospels, in Latin; written, probably in Western Germany, 9th century. Bound in wooden boards, covered with silver plates, showing traces of gilding, of the 14th century. In a sunk panel on the upper cover is a seated figure of Christ, in high relief, the hollow beneath filled with relics; the borders have a scroll-and-flower pattern repoussé, and, as well as the panel, are set with gems, renewed in 1838. Attached to the two outer corners are the symbols of SS. Luke and John, set in translucent enamel of deep blue, the nimbi green. The sunk panel on the under cover has a fine ivy-leaf pattern repoussé, with an embossed Agnus Dei in the centre; the borders similar to those on the upper cover, but without the gems and enamels. [Add. MS. 11,848.]
5. Psalter, in Latin; written and illuminated for Melissenda, daughter of Baldwin, king of Jerusalem [1118–1131], and wife of Fulk, count of Anjou, and king of Jerusalem [1131–1144]. Inserted in the wooden covers are two fine Byzantine ivory-carvings of the 12th century. On the upper cover are six scenes from the life of David, enclosed within circles, the figures in the intervening spaces symbolizing the triumph of the Virtues over the Vices; the whole surrounded with an elaborate interlaced and floriated border. The general design of the under cover is similar, with six scenes representing the works of Mercy, and figures of birds and beasts. At the top is the name Herodius, probably that of the artist. Both covers jewelled with small rubies and turquoises. [Egerton MS. 1139.]
6. Liber Sapientiae: early 13th century. English binding of thick wooden boards, covered with brown leather, blind-tooled: archaic stamps forming a central panel, with border; the designs including, on the upper cover, a bishop in pontificals, a lion, a mounted warrior with lance, a half-length warrior with sword and shield, rosettes, and a honeysuckle device, and, on the under cover, a church, a centaur shooting, a stag, a crowned king mounted, a winged lion with nimbus, and a saltire between four human heads. [Add. MS. 24,076.]
7. Historia Evangelica, by Petrus Comestor, 13th century. English binding of wooden boards covered with dark-brown leather, blind-tooled: a panel, with border, the stamps bearing king David, a lion, a griffin, a dragon, etc. [Egerton MS. 272.]
